OTTAWA — The Trudeau government was trapped today between the danger of a renewed postal strike and the need to break its own anti-inflation guidelines.

The crunch came Wednesday when the Anti-Inflation Board rejected the settlement that ended a six week strike by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

The settlement, which provided for a 38 per cent pay increase over 30 months, was well in excess of the government's eight per cent a year guide but in line with a contract obtained by mail carriers a few months ago.

The cabinet will meet tonight in an unusual session to decide whether to over-rule the board.

After a four-hour cabinet meeting today, Prime Minister Trudeau told reporters that "they (the board) are going to send us a reasoned desicion this afternoon. Sometime tonight we will have to give them a reasonable answer."

If cabinet over-rules the Anti-Inflation Board, much of the board's credibility would be shattered and other groups would certainly attempt to exceed the pay guidelines.

On the other hand, attempts to renew contract negotiations would almost certainly lead to another CUPW walkout.

The union can still strike legally until the agreement is signed.

The Anti-Inflation Board Wednesday made no formal announcement that it had rejected the agreement between the Post Office and CUPW.

However, it became generally known that the board had turned thumbs down.

Prime Minister Trudeau said the board had contacted several cabinet ministers and, he understood, the union—to

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's 2,200 air traffic controllers are seeking a 20 per cent wage increase in a one-year contract, Bill Robertson, vice-president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said Wednesday.

The present contract expires at the end of this month and controllers have not yet sought the services of a conciliation board.

Gov't Lifts Ceilings On Subsidized Homes

IT ISN'T LEAKS from City Hall that worry Toronto aldermen. It's leaks at City Hall. Councillors Reid Scott and David Smith share a brolly while nearby bucket catches drips from the leaking roof at $31 million structure. About $62,000 has been spent to fix the roof but the rain keeps coming through.

OTTAWA — New price ceilings for houses under the government's subsidized home ownership plan were announced today by Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson.

The new maximum in Victoria is $45,000, up $3,000 from $42,000.

In Vancouver and Toronto, it has been raised to $47,000 from $43,000.

Danson released to the Commons welfare committee the new price limits which amount to an increase of as much as 10 per cent in some areas.

An aide to Danson said the limits were kept within federal anti-inflation guides.

In some places, there is no increase in the ceilings under the assisted home ownership program.

Houses above the price ceilings cannot qualify under AHOP and buyers cannot get interest-reducing payments from the federal government.

Builders have complained that the limits were too low in high-cost housing areas like Toronto and Vancouver.

Few buyers could take advantage of AHOP in these places.

Price limits in other metropolitan areas with current maximums in brackets: Calgary, $36,000 ($33,000); Edmonton, $36,000, ($33,000; Halifax, $38,500 ($36,000; Hamilton $43,000 ($41,000).

Montreal $31,500 ($29,000); Ottawa-Hull, $38,000, ($35,000); Regina, $35,000 ($34,000).

Winnipeg, $35,600, ($33,000); Cranbrook, $33,000 ($32,000); Kelowan, $34,000 ($32,000).

Prince George, $39,000 ($37,000); Red Deer, Alta., $30,500 ($28,000); Yellowknife, N.W.T., $43,500, ($39,500; and the Yukon Territory, $41,000 ($39,000).

The federal anti-inflation progam permits price increases only to cover higher production costs.

2 ICBC MEN CHARGED IN FRAUD CASE

VANCOUVER (CP) — An adjuster and an estimator with the Insurance Corporation of B.C. (ICBC) along with the office manager of a Richmond body shop are to appear in Vancouver provincial court Jan. 12, charged with conspiring to defraud ICBC.

Stuart Trober, 30, an ICBC adjuster; David Sharma, 30, an estimator; Stanley Kadlex, 25, office manager of Tri Starr Collision Repairs Ltd. of 375 No. 3 Road, Richmond, and the body shop itself are charged.

The charge says they conspired to defraud ICBC of money by submitting "douements which did not accurately reflect the amount of work performed, parts supplied and/or costs incurred" in repairing certain cars between Feb. 1 and May 30 this year.

In addition, Trober and Sharma face a second count of conspiring with John Carson, 24, and Michael Davis, 19, to defraud ICBC of $959 by submitting false insurance claims.

Trober also faces another count of conspiring with Spencer Rea, 29, Peter Humphrys, 31, Davis and Carson to defraud ICBC of $2,132 by submitting false insurance claims.

Price Index Still Jumping

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The cost of living continued to rise steeply in November, mainly because of higher prices for shelter, transportation and food, Statistics Canada reported today.

The consumer price index rose nine-tenths of one per cent in November, the same as the jump recorded in October. There had been a one-month respite in September, when the index rose only two-tenths of one per cent, following a chain of successive sharp monthly rises during the summer.

The November figures come as the anti-inflation board is rushing to develop its price monitoring system and is under continuing criticism from union leaders and others that it won't be effective in controlling prices. The board has already turned down several proposed wage increases, including the postal workers' contract, because they exceeded rises allowed by the anti-inflation program.

The November increase set an annual inflation rate of 10.4 per cent.

Statistics Canada said increased shelter costs for both owned and rented accommodation accounted for much of the 1.0 per cent rise in the non-food price index. Shelter costs rose 0.1 per cent in the month.

The 1.9 per cent rise in the transportation component largely reflected higher new car prices which were up 3.4 per cent over the year-end 1975 model prices.

Increased housing and transportation costs accounted for two-thirds of the total increase in the consumer price index.

The price changes pushed the value of a 1971 dollar down to only 69 cents.

Food prices increased 0.6 per cent during the month, as did cost of clothing. Health and personal care costs climbed 1.0 per cent while the indices for recreation, education and reading and also those of tobacco and alcohol products each edged up 0.2 per cent.

Partially responsible for the small increase in food prices was the decline in cost of sugar, which was 47 per cent cheaper than a year ago.

'Baby, Just Wait'

"Crowded right now? Baby just you wait."

That's the well-aimed family planning message in Indonesia, the Unitarian Service Committee's newest field of co-operation with an overwhelming population of 180,000,00.

Indonesia has an average density of 1,660 persons for every square mile. Health care, education and family planning have been chosen as the joint USC-government goals.

Despite government pledges to erect 10,000 three-room schools before January 1976, more than three million children will go without schooling.

At the Aria Putra Children's home, targets are to provide primary health care in Klomkok, Central Java; to provide a three-year subsidy for health services until the home's membership grows and to grant assistance in community development.

The USC has also been asked to sponsor a vocational training program to construct a two-storey building containing four rooms to be attached to the Muhammadiyah Vocational Training Centre established in 1912. Since its inception the centre has already created 7,000 schools.

A survey conducted earlier this year by USC executive director Lotta Hitschmanova, and special adviser Dr. Gordon Merrill, found that although family planning is a basic policy of the government the density of population has prompted the goal of reducing the current 2.8 per cent annual growth rate to 2 per cent, hopefully by the year 2,000.

The government is asking for assistance from abroad and there is a national family planning co-ordinating board working in the country.

Large billboards in Jakarta promote family planning and the Indonesian coin in greatest use carries a symbol of family planning. In that country, too, women hold key positions in and outside the government and take their women's rights for granted, says Dr. Hitschmanova.

Another sign in use in Indonesia clarifies further the family planning message: "The population bomb is everybody's baby."

Bennett Finale Pre-Empts 'Race with the Devil'

Social Credit leader Bill Bennett pre-empted an adventure movie in Kelowna Wednesday night to make his last speech before the election today.

The movie at the Paramount Theatre was to have been, Race with the Devil, but the crowd of about 800 Social Credit supporters got a Bill Bennett feature instead; a province-wide re-run whose star last appeared here Nov. 12 when he was nominated to seek re-election in Okanagan South.

Meanwhile in Oak Bay Progressive Conservative leader Dr. Scott Wallace, eschewed the political forum in favor of his role as a father.

After a quiet dinner at home with his family he went with his family to Oak Bay High School to listen to his 14-year-old daughter, Julie, playing in a band concert.

"All the youngsters have spent the last few weeks working for me, delivering election brochures and the like," said Wallace. "I'm returning the compliment."

In Victoria, voters were lined up outside the doors of most polling stations even before the 8 a.m. opening today.

Returning officers issued last-minute cautions that voting must be done with an X made entirely within the space indicated and with the pencil provided in the voting booth.

The heaviest turnout was expected during the final hours before the 8 p.m. closing.

Information on where to vote and transportation to the polls may be obtained by phoning party headquarters in each constituency. These phone numbers are listed in newspaper advertisements or may be obtained by dialing 113 and asking for the party headquarters phone number in that constituency.

Information may also be obtained by phoning or going down to the returning office for the constituency. The returning office phones however will be given busy signals for most of the day because of the expected rush for information.

The addresses and phone numbers of the returning offices are:

Victoria — 1119 Vancouver St., 388-9443 or 388-9261.

Oak Bay — 1958 Fort St., 595-3442 or 595-3841.

Saanich-The Islands — 1020 McKenzie Avenue, 479-2715.

All liquor stores are closed in British Columbia for the full day. Hotels and restaurants may begin serving alcoholic beverages at 8 p.m.

Interest Cancellation Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Department stores and most banks are rejecting suggestions by Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young that they cancel interest charges incurred by the public during the recent mail strike.

The minister has urged that interest not be charged on credit purchases for which customers did not receive monthly statements.

She said Tuesday that the Toronto Dominion Bank and major oil companies have adopted this policy and urged others to do the same.

Representatives of other banks said they made special arrangements for Chargex and Mastercharge payments during the strike and it would be extremely costly to allow a blanket cancellation.

Belfast Stores Shattered In Powerful Bomb Blast

BELFAST (UPI) — A powerful bomb exploded on Belfast's main thoroughfare this afternoon, blowing out storefronts along a full block in a city centre area crowded with Christmas shoppers.

First reports said a warning had been given in time for the street to be cleared and there were no casualties.

The large bomb went off in Royal Avenue opposite the main British army headquarters in the city, a building guarded with pillboxes and protected by antirocket screens. The building had been a bomb target twice before.

Meanwhile in London Irish Republican Army gunmen holded up in a downtown apartment broke their 36-hour silence today and resumed talks with police. But they refused to discuss the condition of their two hostages.

Police commander James Nevill went to the front door of the house where the hostages are being held and, speaking through a bullhorn, asked if the gunmen wanted a new portable toilet.

"Yes" came a shouted reply. A rope was lowered from a third floor window to retrieve the toilet.

The conversation was the first communication with the gunmen since Tuesday night.

Nevill asked "what is the state of the hostages this morning?" There was no reply. He repeated the question, but the gunmen would not answer.

There was also no reply when he asked if they would accept a hot-line telephone link as they had Tuesday night.

STRAIT QUAKE

An earthquake measuring 3.5 intensity was recorded today in Georgia Strait at nearly the same place as a stonger disturbance Nov. 30.

Dr. William Milne, of the department of energy, mines and resources seismology section, said the latest tremor at 7:03 a.m. is part of a series of small earthquakes recorded in the strait recently.

He said there were two small ones Wednesday, also near the centre of the body of water, almost in a line between Pt. Grey and Nanaimo.

B.C. Leading Abortion Rate Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of therapeutic abortions performed in Canada in 1974 was up 11.4 per cent from the previous year's total, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

By province, British Columbia had the highest 1974 rate at 29.2 and Newfoundland had the lowest at 1.5 abortions per 100 live births.

The increase is based on a total of 48,136 legal abortions reported performed in Canadian hospitals during 1974, up from 43,201 in 1973.

This produced a rate of 14 abortions per 100 live births, up from a rate of 12.6 in 1973.

However, the agency said that incomplete statistics showed that an additional 4,299 women resident in Canada had legal abortions in the United States during 1974.

This produced an over-all 1974 total of 52,425 therapeutic abortions, or a rate of about 15.3 per 100 live births in Canada. The over-all figures were not compared with previous years.

The 1974 Canadian abortion rate of 14 per 100 live births compared to 1973 rates of 19.5 in the U.S. and 17 in England and Wales. The rate also was compared with 15 other countries, which had rates ranging from a high of 102.3 in Hungary in 1973 to a low of 2.2 in Tunisia in 1973.

The abortion rate in the other areas: Ontario, 20; Alberta and the Yukon, 15; Manitoba, 8.3; Nova Scotia, 8; Saskatchewan, 7.9; Northwest Territories, 6.2; Quebec, 5.3; New Brunswick, 3.8; Prince Edward Island, 2.6.

The agency released additional information on 41,227 of the women who had abortions in Canada, or about 85 per cent of the total.

—58 per cent were single, 31 per cent were married and the remaining 11 per cent were separated, divorced, widowed or unmarried, but living as though married.

—31 per cent were under 20 years of age, 58 per cent were aged between 20 and 34 and the remaining 11 per cent were 35 or older.

—57 per cent had not previously had a delivery, 14 per cent had previously had one or two deliveries and the remaining 15 per cent had previously had three or more deliveries.

The 1974 Canadian abortion rate was based on the 1973 total of live births because birth figures were not available for 1974.

Museum Men Doubt Nessie Pictures

LONDON (AP) — A group from the United States who say they photographed the Loch Ness monster are angered because scientists from London's Natural History Museum say the pictures prove nothing.

"The only skepticism we have met comes from the museum," said Robert Rines, a lawyer who is president of the Boston Academy of Applied Science. He made the remark after a showing of the photographs at a news conference Wednesday night.

"They've been hoaxed in the past, and they have to be careful. But their hostile and emotional attack is unwarranted."

Rines says a research team he headed took photos 45 feet down in the murky waters of Loch Ness of the legendary creature known as Nessie. One of the pictures which was seen by reporters in the U.S. a week ago shows a rust-colored object that appears to have two frontal appendages, a long neck and a head.

Another photo shows what appears to be a snarling face.

"This fantastic wonder deserves serious scientific study," said Rines. "There was no trickery involved."

But experts from the Natural History Museum said in a statement that the photos "do not constitute acceptable evidence of the existence of a large living animal."

Zoologist Gordon Sheals also objected because Rines and a British associate, naturalist Sir Peter Scott, gave Nessie the scientific name Nessiteras Rhombopteryz, a mixture of Latin and Greek meaning "the Ness monster with the diamond fin."

Sheals said the "fancy-sounding scientific tag" falsely suggests that the monster exists.

But Chris McGowan, associate curator of the Royal Ontario Museum's department of vertebrate paleontology, said:

"I'm satisfied there is sufficient weight of evidence to support that there is an unexplained phenomenon of considerable interest in Loch Ness; the evidence suggests the presence of large aquatic animals."

Rines' report had been scheduled to be delivered at a symposium in Edinburgh. But the sponsors—Edinburgh University, Heriot Watt University and the Royal Society of Edinburgh—cancelled it, saying the advance publicity made calm scientific judgment impossible.

TIGHT GUARD AFTER FRASER PELTINGS

MELBOURNE (Reuter) — Extra police guards were placed around caretaker Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser's home today after 1,000 demonstrators gave him the most hostile reception of Australia's election campaign.

Fraser, leader of the Liberal-Country party coalition, was struck on the neck by a paper bag full of beer as he arrived to address a rally at Melbourne's Northcote town hall Wednesday. Demonstrators also spat at Fraser and thumped and kicked his car.

Meanwhile, opinion polls continued to indicate Fraser's coalition, appointed by Governor-General Sir John Kerr Nov. 11 to replace Gough Whitlam's Labor Party government, will win the election Saturday.

Time Canada Staff Get Lay-Off Notice

TORONTO (UPI) — Time magazine's Canadian edition staff received lay-off notices Wednesday in anticipation of government legislation that will make the $1.5 million operation unprofitable.

Time staffers here and in Montreal confirmed that they were given notices, effective the end of the year.

The Canadian edition of the magazine will cease publication after 32 years because of a government bill stripping the magazine of its tax breaks to advertisers.

The bill, awaiting third and final reading in the House of Commons, is expected to pass the senate and become law before Parliament adjourns Dec. 19 for the Christmas recess.

"If the bill passes, which we expect it will, the last edition of Time-Canada will be dated Dec. 29," Time-Canada president Stephen Larue said Wednesday.

He said the company's 60 employees have received notice effective Dec. 31. He said only an Ottawa correspondent would remain in Canada out of the 30-member editorial staff now working here.

Canadian subscribers, who have had the special Canadian edition of Time since 1943, face a price hike on the U.S. edition that will be distributed in this country next year, Larue said.

Time now has a weekly circulation of 525,000 in Canada, but Larue said he expects a drop in circulation after the Canadian edition is discontinued.

The government bill seeks to Canadianize the nation's magazine industry by requiring 80 per cent Canadian content in all publications getting federal tax breaks.

Time Canada had said it could not operate its Canadian edition without the tax concession. The company has offered to halve its advertising rates next year when the U.S. edition is distributed here.

KISSINGER IRKED

BRUSSELS (AP) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger told NATO foreign ministers today that massive Soviet armament and intervention in Angola were disturbing the world balance.

Kissinger accused the Russians of stepping far beyond their normal area of interest and said the balance of power must be maintained.

At the same time, he assured the allies that detente would survive in the long run because the Soviets have an economic interest in accommodation with the west.

Kissinger's speech to a closed session of the North Atlantic council, reported by Western sources, pointed up American concern over Soviet support in Angola for the Popular Movement, one of the rival liberation groups in the former Portuguese African colony.

Kissinger brought up the problem of Angola at the annual winter meeting of NATO foreign ministers which is expected to approve his proposal to withdraw 1,000 U.S. tactical nuclear warheads from West Germany.

Moluccans Free More Hostages

Times News Services

AMSTERDAM — South Moluccan gunmen released two of their remaining 31 hostages aboard a train in northern Holland today after their first meeting with mediators in four days.

The man, believed aged 82, and the woman walked unaided and alone 300 yards from the besieged train across a potato field to the nearest police post.

The couple, believed the oldest of the captives, were taken to an emergency medical centre.

In Amsterdam, 75 miles to the south, a Dutch official reported new contacts that seemed to be "not unfavorable" with a second band of South Mooluccan gunmen holding 25 hostages in the Indonesian consulate.

The freeing of the couple from the train was the first release in the twin sieges since the gunmen turned loose two sick adults from the consulate Tuesday.

The train gunmen had freed an elderly married couple Sunday at the last mediation session on board.

South Moluccan sources, meanwhile, says the band of gunmen aboard the train are deeply religious men who read the bible anl wept before and after each slaying.

"They knew they were going to kill," said a young member of the South Moluccan community Wednesday.

"Before and after each death, they prayed that God would forgive them, after every killing they wept a long time."

A prosecutor Wednesday charged a seventh gunman from the train, identified only by the initials P.S., with first degree murder, a charge that carries life imprisonment on conviction.

The gunman surrendered Friday after he and two hostages were injured in an explosion aboard the train.

urge that a lower settlement be sought.

A board spokesman said last night there are two ways out: The board might "coax, cajole and consult" the two parties to accept changes or "cabinet can over-rule the Board."

Jean Luc Pepin, chairman of the Board, said he hoped the parties could be "shaved down."

"If we had not considered the agreement beyond the guidelines, we would not have contacted the parties involved," he noted.

"We can't have different standards for different people if the program is to work," Pepin said.

Earlier Wednesday Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey said he would fight any move by the Anti-Inflation Board to disallow the settlement.

"I would go to the Anti-Inflation Board on behalf of the workers of the CUPW, even though I have contempt for some of their leaders, and fight for the workers who have been deprived of wages for 41 days," he said in question period.

Since anti-inflation legislation has not yet been passed and the board is operating under authority of an order in council, the cabinet has final authority in a case of dispute over a Board ruling.

Pepin while acknowledging that the Board's decision may be overruled by cabinet, but he denied that the Board is engaging in a trial of strength with the government.

"We're just playing our role as well as we can," he said.

the weather

Colder, drier air continues moving over B.C. under the influence of a weakening ridge of high pressure. Variable amounts of cloud interspersed with clear periods prevails over much of the province together with a little snowflurry activity on the north coast and elsewhere mainly near the mountains. Today and Friday the weather will be cloudy with sunny periods on the south coast while northern coastal regions will experience a few snowflurries today with steadier precipitation developing on Friday ahead of a weather system approaching the Queen Charlotte Islands in the afternoon and spreading to the mainland in the evening. Over the interior night and morning low cloud and fog will be followed by sunshine in the afternoon except over the Okanagan and Thompson districts where mainly cloudy skies will occur together with the odd snowflurry on both days.

The winter program at the CEDAR HILL COMMUNITY CENTRE runs January to March and just a sample of offerings for all ages includes arts and crafts, photography, bridge and badminton.

The arts and crafts program lists needlepoint and bargello, small rug making, batik, macrame, sewing and design, crochet, smocking and quilting among subjects.

Among some of the more unusual other offerings: model plane building, home canning, preserving and dehydrating, a science experiment class for children 6 to 9, French in song and game for children, guitar, puppet theatre and jazz dance.

Registration is on Jan. 2, 3 and 5, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. More information at 595-7121.

A Christmas pot-luck supper, with Santa and entertainment, is being planned for all JAMES BAY COMMUNITY residents.

It will take place next Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the James Bay Community School. Individuals, families or groups are asked to bring a main course dish and a dessert or salad large enough for their needs, plus utensils.

Questions can be answered by phoning the school at 384-7184.

Another organization planning a Christmas party is the COMMUNITY ACTION GROUP, based at 551½ Fisgard St. It's slated for Dec. 20 from 2 to 4 p.m. with gifts to be given all the children.

Members are expected to give a hand with the food arrangements and are asked to see Gloria Harris.

Sharon MacBain of the same organization wants to start a craft program in the new year and is looking for people with special talent willing to donate an hour of their time a week.

Six workers have been hired by the FERNWOOD COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION on a $24,700 Local Initiatives Project grant they've just received.

They will comb the Fernwood area and knock on every door—that's 10,000 residents—asking people what they would like to see in the way of increased neighborhood activities.

"We'll be pulling people together who could live side by side and not even know each other," said community worker Marilyn Simes.

She expects many residents want more social events planned.

Issues such as increased traffic control in some areas may also arise, though, she said. Although the association has no authority to enforce such control, it could approach those who do, said Marilyn.

The door-to-door work began this week.

Money for the planning project will support the six workers for six months.

Meanwhile, residents have banded together in a NEIGHBORHOOD IMPROVEMENT PROJECT committee to make initial plans on spending the $1 million Marilyn says has been allocated to Fernwood.

A grocery co-operative outlet to serve about 3,000 customers is being planned for the Greater Victoria rea.

Sponsored by the GREATER VICTORIA CONSUMERS CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION, the co-op will likely be financed through the B.C. Development Corporation, said interim president Charles Norman.

He said the co-op will concentrate on the sale of groceries, but will sell in addition, basic clothing, such as children's denims; gasoline and tires.

Norman said the operation will be patterened after the successful Nanaimo co-op and "shareholders can expect to save up to 15 per cent on groceries and more on major appliances."

He said a membership drive will be started in the new year, and he doesn't expect difficulty in getting the required 1,000.

Full membership requires the purchase of 10 shares, but membership would be available on the purchase of one $10 share, he added. The remaining $90 would be collected on opening of the store by a levy of 2 per cent of sales.

Norman said the Victoria co-op will follow about six months behind the opening of the Saanich Peninsula co-op scheduled to open by mid-summer.

Two-Year Term for Extortion Try

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

James Archie Hancock, 34, was sentenced Wednesday in county court to two years less a day in jail for attempted extortion involving $100,000.

Judge L. F. Cashman, in passing sentence, referred to an extortion conviction Oct. 31 in which he sentenced Gilles Paul Proulx, 30, also to two years less a day in jail.

Proulx was gound guilty by a county court jury of inducing Edgar McBride, manager of the Toronto Dominion Bank at 1080 Douglas, by threat, to pay $9,000 but intended to extort $100,000, on Jan. 9.

Judge Cashman said Wednesday he sentenced Proulx to "considerably less than I had in mind" but his understanding then of a B.C. Court of Appeal case "turned out to be quite wrong." Otherwise, he said, he would have sentenced him to "considerably more" than two years less a day.

He said because of the Proulx sentence, he should treat Hancock on a similar basis.

Hancock was found guilty of attempting to extort $100,000 March 27 from Vincent Fourt, manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce at Hillside Shopping Centre, by threats to harm his daughter Deanna, who was 14 at the time.

Judge Cashman said British Columbia has "thankfully" been free of acts of terrorism which was what this crime came down to. He was "hard-pressed" to think of a more "cowardly" crime than extortion.

"As a criminal you appear quite unsuccessful and the extortion attempt here was quite clumsy," he told Hancock.

The sentence will run concurrent with two other sentences Hancock is serving.

He was sentenced Dec. 1 to four months less one day for armed robbery at the Beacon Drive-In March 22 and was earlier sentenced to 20 months on two counts of conspiracy to commit armed robbery between April 1 and 26. On the latter conviction, he was jointly charged and sentenced with Proulx.

Defence counsel Mike Hutchison told court the armed robbery March 22 was Hancock's first crime and he "fell prey" to alcohol and was "in a state of economic desperation."

He urged a sentence of less than two years so that Hancock could remain in a provincial jail rather than a federal penitentiary. This, he said, would give Hancock the best chance for rehabilitation which in the end was the best protection for society.

Court was told earlier Fourt received a telephone call around noon March 27 at his office from an unidentified male person who said he had Deanna at gunpoint and demanded $100,000 for her release. Instructions were given for him to follow.

Police were contacted and Fourt quickly established his daughter was not being held by anyone but was safe at home. In conjunction with police, he then followed the instructions given him in the phone call.

With a policeman in the back of his van, he drove to a pay phone by the Memorial Arena where he found further instructions to drive to the top floor of the nearby Hudson's Bay parkade.

He left the van there unlocked and 15 or 20 minutes later Hancock reached in for a large brown envelope which contained $250 and papers designed to make it look like a large bundle. He was immediately apprehended by S. Sgt. Gordon Bennett who was in the back of the van, arrested moments later by another policeman and taken away.

Crown counsel David Lisson said Hancock's "biggest mistake" was not looking in the van before he reached in for the package.

He asked if, considering all the evidence, there was another reasonable or rational explanation than that he was a party to the extortion attempt, pointing out Hancock had been in the area of the pay phone as well as the van.

Hutchison said other inferences can be drawn from Hancock's conduct, that he might have gone to the pay phone to make a call and the action of reaching into the van for the package was consistent with a "common sneak thief."

There was no evidence that Hancock had made the threatening phone call to Fourt, he said.

Judge Cashman said before he could convict Hancock he must be satisfied that the circumstances were consistent with him committing the crime and inconsistent with any other rational explanation.

All the circumstances must be considered together and not each one separately, he said.

The evidence linked Hancock with the pay phone and the van and "one is hard-pressed to think of any circumstances more incriminating than those."

Judge Cashman said he could not accept the defence theory that Hancock was simply a thief who picked that day, that time and that van to steal a package. It stretched credulity to the breaking point, he said.

A common thief would be unlikely to take an envelope with a bank stamp on it which no reasonable person would expect to contain money unless there was prior knowledge.

Mandarins Ignore Their Boss

When the auditor general tables his report opposition members have enough question period fodder to last well into January. The former auditor general did his job so well the government tried to do away with his post. Despite a change in style the new man, J. J. Macdonell, appears to have the instincts for the jugular possessed by his predecessor, Maxwell Henderson. In his report for fiscal year 1974-75 Macdonnell says parliament has lost its grip on government spending (as if we didn't know) and departments are openly defying the law to increase their own expenditures.

Some examples. After spending its administrative allocation, the National Energy Board arranged for an extra $90,000 to be charged to another board which reports to the same minister but receives its funds under a different vote. In contravention of its enabling legislation the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority is not paying interest on outstanding loans. A total of $161.8 million in accrued interest is owing to the people of Canada. These are but two examples of what has become an annual litany of financial horrors. Macdonnell adds a new dimension, however, when he says the bureaucrast have in effect taken over. They are doing as they please, juggling funds, losses and allocations like a merchant with two sets of books.

Waste and government are old bedfellows. The best that can be done is to install a strict chaperone beside the bed. Macdonnell fills this role. But what has happened to our civil service, often described as among the best in the world, when it flagrantly circumvents parliament, spending public money to suit its own aggrandizement? The gray eminence ascribed to our mandarins seems to characterize their morals too. If these people take their trust so lightly, it is time for major shakeup in top civil service echelons and tighter controls to ensure better parliamentary scrutiny. Legislative control over government spending is essential or the whole process of parliamentary democracy is eroded.

The auditor general is not sure who should hold the reins, except that it should not be the secretary of the treasury board. In this we concur. It is the treasury board that dispenses monies. By its very nature it is not an ally of the auditor general. When Bud Drury was president of the board he and Maxwell Henderson were at each other's throats. A more detailed accounting of estimates — ministerial and departmental spending proposals — combined with a more powerful auditor general are probably the best ways to ensure public money is well spent. The federal government is like a giant company. Every Canadian is a shareholder. When corporate management starts throwing around funds without recourse to shareholders or their representatives stock declines or management is replaced. The same is true for governments.

An Election Abuse

Whichever party forms the government after the election today, there is one electoral abuse that cries out for reform — the practice of anonymous advertising by various "concerned" groups of citizens.

Such ads have poured in upon the voters in this election campaign. There have been series of messages from "concerned citizens and foresters," a running commentary from "private insurance companies operating in B.C." which is entitled "Thanks for the memories" and ads from both "businessmen for Barrett" and "businessmen against Barrett"—all unidentified.

Vancouver newspaper readers have been treated to some wild ones. A coalition called "Vancouver Centre Constituents for responsible government" urges those "in doubt" to vote for Socred Herb Capozzi (running mate of the discredited Alan Lau) and NDP candidate Gary Lauk.

A particularly offensive pitch is made by a committee of blushing violets who lump themselves together as "Disillusioned Vancouver Citizens" trying to scare the voter with inch-high letters:

"Hi Sucker! Vote them back into power. They've enjoyed the fun (and the money) ... Another time around and they will show you what state control really means. Hi Sucker!"

Some of the non-party advertising has been signed, such as an appeal to ensure Liberal leader Gordon Gibson is re-elected in North Vancouver-Capilano, and (not to lump them together in the same political category) a full page ad from the ultra right-wing Canadian League of Rights which warns of wholesale NDP nationalization plans. At least they had the courage of their convictions, and weren't afraid to back up opinions they believed in, no matter what section of the political spectrum they occupied, no matter how unpopular.

But who are these anonymous committees of concerned and disillusioned citizens, these anonymous foresters and insurance companies? Why don't they come forward into the light? Whom do they fear?

These timid anonymous groups should by law have to identify themselves. Just as political parties now (under the Election Act) must identify themselves in party-paid advertisements in print or on the airwaves, and must submit complete accounts of their election spending, so should lobbying groups and ad hoc committees of citizens be forced by law to do the same.

Non-Partisan Gesture

One group which makes a traditional Christmas appeal to Canadians to help the down and out, the friendless, those befuddled with drugs and booze, the single unemployed with no family, is the Salvation Army.

It does the same work day in, day out all year long, but asks for extra donations in mid-December each year to make Christmas as close to the cheery, special occasion most of us know in our homes.

Prisoners in jail, the sick and lonely in hospitals, needy children, the unwanted — all have been aided by the Salvation Army at Christmas in years past, and will be helped again this Christmas.

Winners or losers in election politics — a donation to the "Sally Ann" is as non-partisan a gesture as you can make. While making the rounds of department stores in your Christmas shopping, remember the Salvation Army and the good works it accomplishes. Keep their red kettles "boiling."

Something's Badly Out of Joint

OTTAWA — The plot thickens. Twice during the past three months or so senior aides of Prime Minister Trudeau have leaked word to reporters that Beryl Plumptre, the vice-chairman of the anti-inflation board, has told the government that because of the physical strain of her work she would like to step down in the near future.

These inspired leaks happen to be rubbish. Thoughts fathered by a wish. Plumptre has never told the government anything of the kind. About a week ago, one Trudeau aide told me Plumptre had written to the prime minister to say she would like to step down early in 1976.

Can Be Rude

In fact, Plumptre in her letter simply advised Trudeau she could not commit herself beyond early next year and did so only because she never commits herself more than six months ahead.

To guess the reason behind these attempts to plant stories isn't hard. Plumptre's popularity with the public is such that the government is helpless to control her. She can say, as she has done, rude things about Ottawa's failure to control — let alone to cut — its spending and not a peep of protest emerges from the East Block. Her going would wreck beyond repair the credibility of the anti-inflation board — or at least would do so until chairman Jean-Luc Pepin establishes his own reputation.

Plumptre cannot be commanded to shut up, nor can her silence be bought. At 67, she isn't looking to government for another job. She can, though, be undermined. By creating a public expectation that Plumptre is likely to leave for reasons of health, the government will lessen the impact of her resignation, if it happens, for reasons of principle.

The trick is an old one, always shabby, and on this occasion clumsily executed. What intrigues me about this gimmick is that it should have been attempted at all. To a degree hard to comprehend, the government has a comfortable majority and it has plenty of time left in its term.

Politics have shaped the greater part of the anti-inflation program, from its timing (just before the Liberal convention), through its form (the lack of a 90-day freeze because this would too closely have resembled the Conservatives' controls program) to, in the case of Plumptre, its execution.

Trudeau's obsession with political advantage now threatens the controls program at the very moment when the combination of general public support for the program and the board's firmness in dealing with the 43 per cent wage demands of Toronto teachers make it possible that, for all its inadequacies and weaknesses, the policy might yet be made to work.

Two decisions, both crucial to the success of the controls program, face the cabinet in the next fortnight.

First, a decision has to be made about how to regulate the salaries of professionals like doctors and lawyers.

"Professionals are articulate, they are well-organized and they vote for the government," says one insider. The only effective way to control the salary increases of professionals is by a confiscatory surtax of all income above the $2,400 extra allowed. The prospects that cabinet will implement such a surtax range between nil and remote.

Second, the cabinet has to make up its mind about reductions in government spending. Last October, ministers rejected pleas by finance officials for a cut in expenditures to be announced at the same time as the controls program was unveiled. Since then public opinion has forced a shift of opinion within the cabinet.

About $1.5 billion will be lopped off expenditures planned for 1976-77. This will leave the year-to-year growth in spending at around 15 per cent, or markedly higher than the combination of inflation plus real economic growth. Spending, in short, will not be cut in absolute terms; the rate of spending increase will be reduced. To compensate, since the public expects more, the hunt is on for high-profile cuts, like Information Canada and the prime minister's personal staff.

Candidate for Scapegoat

The exemption, for most practical purposes, of professionals from income controls, and the continuation of various vote-winning spending programs, will of course threaten the viability of the entire controls exercise. To deal with the eventuality, the government needs an enemy and a scapegoat. The candidate was selected long ago: organized labor.

Something is out of joint. Utterly and completely so. It's been a long time since the mood of the public has been more realistic or more determined that something be done. It's been a long, long time since the mood of the public's leaders has been more cynical, or more determined that whatever be done, be done for their benefit.

Fourth Term Thanks

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the people of Greater Victoria for supporting me in the recent municipal election.

It is very rewarding to me to be returned for a fourth term and I will continue to work for students, parents and teachers for quality education.

To you all, a Merry Christmas and a Happy Ne Year. — Daphne Temple, Trustee School District 61 (Greater Victoria), 1243 Richardson Street.

Realistic Look

Your editorial in support of the NDP will probably get you a lot of hate mail. I don't agree totally with your views, but I appreciate the courage it took to state them as you did.

You didn't have to stick your neck out. Nobody asked you to, and it probably won't help sell papers. Some of your readers may not like it, some of your advertisers may not like it, the owners of the paper may not like it. Regardless of their political views or yours, every reader ought to be grateful that at least one editor in Victoria has the courage to take a hard look at the realities of this election.—Greg Welsh, 310-200 Dallas Road.

Ill-Advised Stand

Your editorial of Dec. 8 recommending return of the Barrett NDP government has prompted me to cancel my subscription.

Barrett and the NDP are tools of the big unions. Trying to live on a fixed or declining income while unions are increasing the pay of their members by 20 per cent or more every year, I can see that it is only a matter of time until I, and many other pensioners are forced into poverty or onto welfare. I don't want to take this lying down.

Barrett has great consideration for people on welfare or Mincome, but absolutely none for those who have saved or invested to keep themselves off welfare.

If the NDP gets in for four more years they will not get out in our lifetime and B.C. will have a one-party government. By increasing the number of people (welfare recipients, government employees, etc.) dependent on the government, and threatening them with loss of their income if his government is defeated, Barrett can make his government unbeatable. And he will do it.

These are only some of my reasons for thinking your stand ill-advised. There are many more.—John W. Wainwright, 401-1470 Dallas Road.

Vote Moderate

Such a defeatist outlook (voting out existing governments) of the democratic process is a consequence of the polarization of political options created by the W. A. C. Bennett Election Act of 1953. This act deprived the voting public of "alternative voting" and, because of a ban on opinion polls during elections, frustrated us in discovering that a viable alternative is indeed available outside of extreme right or extreme left. We are trapped into voting for governmental parties whose ideologies do not reflect the aspirations of the majority, instead. Bennett Jr. is continuing this polarization pattern by asking us to vote for him and against the socialists.

It is time to repudiate the polarizing approach of the Bennetts. Vote positively, vote for moderate, free enterprise. It has a voice in Wallace, Gibson, Block or Dawson. If Alberta can do it, why not B.C.? Instead of the defeatist path of Hugh Curtis, vote for a choice. — Nicolas Rolland, 327 Raynor Avenue.

Discerning Editorial

Your discerning and important editorial in the Times Monday (A Mandate for David Barrett) should be considered carefully by the electorate before voting on Thursday.

The electorate has therein a balanced and educated overall view of what the consequences are for this province and western Canada should Social Credit be elected.

This horrible extremist conglomeration has, one would hope, perpetuated enough division in this province and Canada to be laid to rest forever.

The younger voters should read the past history of the party and vote accordingly. If they cannot read, then they should listen carefully to what is being said.

The Times is to be congratulated for taking a stand, a very important stand, on this election. It has presented to the voter the real issue of the duty before the voter on Thursday. — Don D. Fraser, 1161 Burnside Road West.

Partisan Newspaper

We read with dismay the Times editorial of Dec. 8 (A Mandate for David Barrett). While we realize the editor has the right to publish his own opinion of people or events, we thought we could buy a newspaper and get a fair representation of all views. This editorial not only makes the Times a partisan newspaper, but it bases its preference on untruths and misleading information. Since we can no longer trust this newspaper to present factual information in an unbiased manner, we have cancelled our subscription to the Times.—R. and L. Restall, Victoria.

Free To Vote

I am Social Credit! Therefore, I am "free" to vote.

No threatening letter threatened my employment, or my freedom.

For anyone with any uncertainty as to how to vote on election day, I would strongly suggest that you take a good second look at a government which actually has the audacity to "threaten" people for votes.

Would you vote under threat?

Your decision is our future. — Shirley Hatch, 520 Rithet Street.

Strange Support

Mr. Barrett knows full well that no political party will cancel Mincome, Pharmacare, the ambulance service. Then why do NDP candidates constantly strike fear into the hearts of the elderly and unfortunate by implying that the Social Credit party, if elected, will cancel these services?

Then there is the matter of Liberal and Conservative kindliness toward the NDP. Many citizens have been puzzled by the fact that two free enterprise parties attack the other one rather than the socialists. One Conservative candidate even admitted that an NDP worker had circulated the petition which enabled him to run.

The reason seems clear now. Liberals, it is reported, decided an NDP defeat would be too great a price to pay for a Social Credit victory and some say openly they would prefer an NDP minority government to a Social Credit one. The Conservatives obviously also adopted this policy. Dr. Scott Wallace and his followers consistently attack Bill Bennett and other Socred candidates rather than Dave Barrett and the NDP.

As for the proposed television debate, the task of administering the affairs of British Columbia is one which calls for sound business ability, administrative experience and a sense of responsibility for the well-being of all of our citizens. We need a man capable of handling our economy wisely and efficiently and getting the province back into a healthy condition.

Such a decision certainly could not be made on the strength of one television debate regardless of how entertaining such a performance might be. — A. F. Davies, 4611 Vantreight Drive.

60 YEARS AGO

LONDON — Except perhaps in the closing hours of a general election, London has never witnessed such scenes as virtually the whole city presented this afternoon with the Earl of Derby's recruiting period extended today to close at midnight tomorrow. In every section of the city recruits came forward in droves. Tens of thousands of workmen, clerks and shop-girls spent their half-holiday in the parks and the streets watching and participating in the recruiting work.

A Horror Story That's Stronger Than Fiction

By ANTHONY LEWIS
New York Times

It is no longer rumor, leak, fragment. A unanimous report of a Senate committee, meticulous and horrifying in its evidence, finds that American officials "initiated and participated in plots to assassinate" foreign leaders.

The Interim Report of the Senate Intelligence Committee is much more than the story of particular plots. It gives the public an extraordinary insight into the world of secret warfare — a view provided only in fiction before now. It describes the policy attitudes that encouraged fantasies of murder, and the mind and morals of the men who acted on them. It examines the institutional arrangements, or lack of them, that allowed the fantasies to get out of control.

One of the CIA's agents in the Congo in 1960 — an "asset," in the secret language reproduced in the report — was known as WI/ROGUE. He was a stateless soldier of fortune, a forger and bank robber recommended by the CIA's Africa Division in this cable: "He is indeed aware of the precepts of right and wrong, but if he is given an assignment which may be morally wrong in the eyes of the world, but necessary because his case officer ordered him to carry it out, then it is right, and he will dutifully undertake appropriate action for its execution without pangs of conscience. In a word, he can rationalize all actions."

But such attitudes were not limited to criminal adventurers at the bottom of the ladder. The idea of assassinating Patrice Lumumba, briefly premier of the newly-independent Congo, involved well-bred men, favorites in Washington and London society. In the summer of 1960 Richard Bissell, the CIA's Deputy Director for Plans, told Bronson Tweedy, Chief of the Africa Division, to explore the feasibility of that murder — to work out the "operational details," as Mr. Tweedy put it in testifying. The attitude went even higher up. The committee found it "clear" that Allen Dulles, the CIA Director, "authorized an assassination plot" against Lumumba, and "a reasonable inference" that President Eisenhower did, too.

How did the state of mind develop? The report first mentions the international setting: the depths of the Cold War, when communism was perceived as "a monolithic enemy." At that time there was an American feeling of overwhelming power and responsibility — of hubris — though results often belied the notion that the United States could control events. Thus in 1963 Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge cabled from Vietnam that he could not stop a developing coup, Washington replied that it would not accept such a weak conclusion, but the coup went ahead.

Then, at various times, the very top of the United States government developed a hysteria about particular foreign leaders — always of small countries. That was true with Mr. Lumumba in 1960. It was true of the new Kennedy Administration with Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, especially after the humiliation of the Bay of Pigs. The committee found no presidential knowledge of murder plans. But the pressure to do something was so intense that Richard Helms, former C.I.A. Director, testified: "I believe it was the policy at the time to get rid of Castro and if killing him was one of the things to be done in this connection, that was within what was expected."

The most recent example of extreme pressure from the White House involved Chile. At a White House meeting on Sept. 15, 1970, with Helms, Henry Kissinger and Attorney General John Mitchell, President Nixon ordered the C.I.A. to help organize a military coup to prevent Salvador Allende Gossens from taking office as president. Helms came away thinking that the president "wanted something done, and he didn't much care how." That was the mood at the top even though the C.I.A. had just made an intelligence report concluding that an Allende government would not threaten vital United States interests or peace in Latin America.

As such strong feelings were conveyed from the White House, some men within the C.I.A. responded with an eagerness and ingenuity that reads, in the pages of the report, like prep school pranks. C.I.A. scientists had a plan to make Castro's beard fall out by dusting his shoes with thalium, a depilatory. High agency officers explored the idea of killing him with exploding seashells, poisoned cigars, a contaminated diving suit. On Nov. 22, 1963, a C.I.A. official offered a Cuban a poison pen for use against Castro. And there was simple bureaucratic eagerness to please. In 1961, Helms said, "We were enormously anxious to try and be successful . . . to earn our spurs with the new president."

Why was this conscienceless enthusiasm not kept under control? First, because C.I.A. officials deliberately used Aesopian language in talking to the president and others outside the agency. Helms testified that he did not want to "embarrass a President" or sit around an official table talking about "killing or murdering." The report found this "circumlocution" reprehensible, saying: "Failing to call dirty business by its rightful name may have increased the risk of dirty business being done." The committee also suggested that the system of command and control may have been deliberately ambiguous, to give presidents a chance for "plausible denial."

Moreover, the other corrective, balancing elements in the American system were absent. Secrecy excluded Congress, most of the Executive branch and the public. Things were thought and done that would never have been proposed publicly. As an example, the committee offered the failure of Attorney-General Robert Kennedy to impose an absolute prohibition when he heard about the use of Mafia figures in a plot against Castro.

In the end, these assassination plots apparently did not work. Senator Walter Mondale said that showed that "Americans are no good at killing and lying and covering up — and I'm glad that that's the case." But the techniques involved may have had their effects nonetheless. Many analysts of Watergate thought it reflected the importation of such practices back into the United States.

And the techniques may be used in any covert action, not just assassinations. Was it proper, for example, to plot against the constitutional processes of Chile? Would it have made any difference, in law or morals or statecraft, if the coup had occurred and the Chilean Army Commander been kidnapped without being killed? Those are among the larger questions that the Senate committee will now explore.

More Job Doors Must Be Opened for Welfare Recipients

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

When the judge says "$30 or 30 days", not having the money to pay the fine used to mean you spent the next 30 days in jail.

Not so any more — at least not in Saskatchewan. Under a unique program begun this year by the province's social services department, impecunious offenders can work off their fines at minimum wage rates in community service jobs instead.

According to Regina's Margery Heath, who directs the program, in its first nine months 465 people worked off fines they couldn't otherwise have paid.

In Winnipeg the first group of 16 former welfare recipients and unskilled low income workers have been enrolled in an experimental "community educator program" sponsored by the provincial Department of Colleges and Universities and the federal Manpower Department.

The project's educational co-ordinator, Darlene Germscheid, describes it as opening up new careers for the trainees, creating new roles for the agencies in which they will be placed, and providing new opportunities for the development of self-awareness in the low income communities in which these newly graduated community educators will be working.

At Montreal's Ville Marie Social Service Centre, the "super agency" which brings together all of the social agencies serving the city's English-speaking community, a consumers' council is being formed.

Ville Marie's co-ordinator of consumer groups, Helen Bastien, is organizing the 25-member body of representatives of organizations of service users. The kinds of groups represented will range from area groups to ethnic groups, from senior citizens' associations to organizations of parents with children in day care. The only requirement is that the council members all be service users, not social service professionals.

What's the common denominator of the Regina, Winnipeg and Montreal programs? Actually it's not in the programs at all. It's in the three women running the programs.

Five years ago Margery Heath, Darlene Germscheid and Helen Bastien were all on welfare.

If they don't fit the welfare stereotype, it's not that they were atypical. It's the stereotype that's wrong.

The picture of welfare recipients as able-bodied, unemployed men probably goes back to the Depression-era soup kitchens. It certainly doesn't fit today.

Only about ten per cent of those on welfare are classed as potentially employable. The rest are suffering from illness or disability, are over 60 years of age, or are mothers alone with dependent children.

The exact proportion of recipients classed as employable varies from province to province, reflecting local unemployment rates. In Newfoundland, for instance, where the unemployment rate is close to 20 per cent, the proportion of those on the welfare rolls who would be capable of working if there were jobs available for them is 17 per cent.

Those classed as employable are obliged to rigorously search for work. In some areas they are even given a form to be completed by a certain number of prospective employers each week certifying that they approached them in search of jobs. The balance of those on welfare are classed as unemployable.

★ ★ ★

Most people wouldn't question this designation of the aged, ill and disabled. In fact the only people who seem to question it are among those so designated. Many of them want jobs and resent being denied them in the workplace.

What about mothers with dependent children? Are they unemployable?

If so it is because they are already fully employed at home raising their children — whether they like it or not.

For them to be able to take outside employment there would first need be adequate low-cost day care facilities available. Which generally there is not.

Second, the job would need to pay enough for all the young mouths waiting at home to be fed. Which the jobs available to women without specialized training generally don't.

The woman on welfare today is a classic victim of yesterday's schoolgirl notions of woman's role as housewife and mother. She married young, had children—and was left to fend for them without support when the marriage ended.

Only in very exceptional circumstances will a welfare department pay for a welfare mother to attend university and obtain the qualifications that will enable her to win a good enough job to escape the welfare trap. Almost invariably, the rules that bar students from welfare eligibility also block recipients from attending school.

Margery Heath, Darlene Germscheid and Helen Bastien got out, in part, simply because they were lucky enough to be in the right place at the right time.

As president of the welfare rights group in Regina and chairperson of the conference that founded a province-wide organization of poor people's groups, Ms. Heath was picked by the provincial government as the one poor person to sit on the commission created to design a legal aid system for the province.

That led to a job in a legal aid clinic and, later, to the directorship of the fine option program.

As a member of the Winnipeg Council of Self Help, Darlene Germscheid was picked by her fellow members (also welfare mothers) as executive director of the community service project set up by the organization under a demonstration grant from the federal welfare department.

That job led to the present one.

Likewise Helen Bastien's years as chairman of a city-wide coalition of poor people's groups in Montreal made her an obvious choice for the job when Ville Marie decided it wanted to create an advisory body composed of representatives of such groups.

When government departments and social agencies began to recognize the special qualifications of those who had experienced the welfare system from the other end, a handful of new doors were opened in the form of jobs for which the conventionally unqualified were uniquely qualified.

But only a handful of people could get through so few doors.

How many more of the 150,000 mothers raising children on welfare allowances are capable of being program directors, project co-ordinators or any of a thousand other things.

How many of the quarter million disabled could be performing valuable functions if they were given the chance?

The next time you hear someone say there are too many people on welfare who could be contributing more to society instead, it could be a welfare recipient talking.

The Bookstore Banners

By WILLIAM FRENCH
The Globe and Mail

The opening of a new bookstore is usually cause for celebration in the community. The number of successful bookstores in a city is an important measure of its cultural maturity, so the more the better.

But one new Toronto bookstore, planned for Bay and Queen Streets, is causing a good deal of apprehension and opposition in the book industry. The attempt to establish it has far-reaching implications, and an important precedent will be set before its doors open — or don't open — to the public.

Two things make this store different. The first is that it's American; its owners are Brentano's, whose 30 bookstores in the United States have an annual sales volume of about $25-million. It would be the first American-owned bookstore in Canada.

The second thing is that since Oct. 15, the federal government has the power to keep Brentano's, or any other American bookstore, out of the country. It can do this through the Foreign Investment Review Agency, which screens applications. The big question is whether it will exercise that power, thus letting all American bookstores know that in future they will not be welcomed here.

The agency is under considerable pressure to prevent Brentano's from opening in Toronto, or anywhere else in the country, for reasons we'll get to in a minute. The pressure is coming from the Book and Periodical Development Council, the umbrella group that represents all the various components of the book business.

To be acceptable, Brentano's must prove the store will be of substantial benefit to the community. That may be difficult, given the number of bookstores already operating in Toronto. In fact there's a Canadian-owned bookstore in the basement of the Thomson Building at Queen and Bay Streets, right beneath the proposed street-level site of the Brentano store.

What makes the agency's decision more difficult is the fact that Canadian-owned bookstores operate freely in the United States. The Montreal-based Classics chain has two stores in New York, and Coles has opened several stores in suburban shopping centres of various American cities. Nobody is suggesting yet that Washington might retaliate if Brentano's is denied entry into Canada and tell Classics and Coles to pack up and go home, but it's a possibility.

Brentano's, meanwhile, has signed a lease on the store in the Thomson Building, and fixtures are being installed. Either the company is unaware that it must get government permission, or believes itself exempt from provisions of the Foreign Investment Review Act.

Until Oct. 15, only American takeovers of existing Canadian companies were subject to screening. But with the implementation on that date of Phase Two of the act, all new American enterprises proposed in Canada are subject to screening. For some, the screening may be a formality. But for others, in which issues of cultural nationalism are involved, such as a publisher or a bookstore, it will be controversial.

If Brentano's had been in business in Canada before Oct. 15, it would have been exempt from screening. But apparently it wasn't; it had no employees here on that date, and hasn't signed a lease for the store. Theoretically, the company could claim exemption under a clause in the act dealing with vertical integration. Brentano's is owned by the Macmillan Publishing Company of New York, which has a Canadian subsidiary, Collier-Macmillan (no relation to Macmillan of Canada, owned by Maclean-Hunter). To claim exemption under the vertical integration clause, the Brentano store in Toronto would have to prove that the major substance of its business was with its parent — in other words it would have to offer for sale almost nothing but Collier-Macmillan books, and it couldn't stay in business long in those circumstances.

So the stage seems set for a showdown, and the nationalists in the publishing industry are regarding it as a real test of whether Secretary of State Faulkner's assurances mean anything. Paul Audley, executive director of the Independent Publishers Association, went to Ottawa last month to make sure the opposition of the Book and Periodical Development Council had been noted, and came back convinced that Brentano's will be denied permission to establish here.

Opposition to Brentano's is not based soley on the competition the store would pose to other booksellers (among them the British-owned W. H. Smith chain). Toronto booksellers insist they're not being parochial, and by no means all of them agree that Brentano's should be barred.

The real reason for opposing Brentano's is that the presence of American bookstores in Canada might undermine the traditional distribution system, to the detriment of Canadian publishers. The Brentano chain, for example, operates on a central warehouse system, with all the stores ordering from the one source instead of directly from the various publishers. The central office dictates to a large extent what books the stores will stock.

Thus the Canadian Brentano's would probably buy its American books in the United Staes, rather than through the Canadian publishers or agents who represent American publishers. One of the traditions of Canadian publishing, so the old argument goes, is that Canadian publishers use the profit from the sale of foreign books to finance their Canadian publishing program. Canadian publishers and authors would be harmed if this practice were undermined, according to this theory.

It's a flimsy argument, I think. Canadian organizations already buy books directly in the United States — school boards, libraries, the Coles' chain — and the book industry hasn't been able to convince anyone in power that the problem is serious enough to justify stopping it. If it did become serious, there are means of dealing with it, as has been done — for other reasons — in Quebec.

If the presence of Brentano's would induce more people to buy more books, as seems likely, surely it should be welcomed. And with the present surge of interest in Canadian books, Brentano's would soon find out that the Toronto store could not operate as though it were just another branch in Milwaukee. It could hardly survive without a good selection of Canadian books.

A decision to keep Brentano's out of Canada would be clearly discriminatroy and indefensible. Banning bookstores makes even less sense than banning books.

Bricklin Assets Purchased

By Canadian Press

A United States firm has purchased nearly all the assets of Bricklin Canada Ltd. seized by Canada Permanent Trust.

Lawyer T. B. Drummie, acting for First Pennsylvania Bank of Philadelphia, said Wednesday all but 68 or 70 cars at the Saint John, N.B., assembly plant and parts and inventories there and at another plant at Minto, N.B., were sold to Continental Automotive Inc. of Columbus, Ohio.

The trust company seizure was on behalf of the bank, which has a $3-million investment in Bricklin Canada. The company went into receivership after the New Brunswick government put a lid on any further investment in the sports car firm.

The province invested $20 million in the venture.

Drummie said First Pennsylvania Bank realized less than half of its $3-million investment in the sale.

On Tuesday, Lawrence Garvie, N.B. economic growth minister, said he was fairly certain the two Bricklin plants would open in some capacity next year but might not be used for manufacturing the sports car.

GOLD DEALER'S HAND SPIKED BY ROBBERS

LONDON (AFP) — Two robbers nailed the hand of a gold dealer to his table in a futile attempt to learn where he hid his gold ingots, police in Brighton, England, said Thursday.

They drove a six-inch spike through the hand of Peter Drummond, 48, using a jack handle as a hammer.

The robbers were about to nail his other hand to the table when they were frightened away by the ring of his telephone.

They took a one-kilo (2.2 pound) silver ingot and some gold coins they found and left Drummond nailed down.

Oil Shares Up At Toronto

Oil shares continued to climb in light mid-afternoon trading at Toronto Thursday. Other prices remained mixed. The industrial index lost .22 to 171.23 and base metals .21 to 71.27. Golds rose 4.27 to 243.39 and western oils 1.25 to 197.73.

Trading by 2 p.m. slackened to 1.07 million shares from 1.75 million at the same time Wednesday. Advances held a slight lead over declines, 158 to 152, with 226 issues unchanged. Hudsonn Bay Mining A tumbled 1¼ to $15½ after the company announced that it cut its quarterly divident payment to 20 cents from 40 cents.

Bell Canada fell 1 to $42½, Reichhold Chemicals 1 to $16¼, Falconridge Nickel ¾ to $27½, Walker-Gooderham A ½ to $28 and Bow Valley Industries ½ to $14⅞.

Moore Corp. gained 1 to $47½, Husky Oil ¾ to $17¾, Simpsons-Sears ⅝ to $9⅝, Gulf Oil Canada ⅝ to $28¼ and Pacific Pete ½ to $26¾.

McIntyre lost ½ to $36½ and Falconridge Copper ¼ to $6. Dome Mines rose ⅝ to $33⅝, Denison ½ to $56 and Rio Algom ½ to $29.

Sunningdale was off ¼ to $6 and Ranger ¼ to $12⅛. Chieftain Development was up ⅛ to $8¼.

London

Prices on the London stock market were fractionally lower in light trading Thursday.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed today at 358.1 down 4.8.

Oil and bank shares recorded some of the largest losses while gold stocks advanced.

Canadian issues edged lower in quiet trading.

Exchanges Not Ready For Telesat Offering

OTTAWA (FP) — Now that Telesat Canada Corp. has decided to spend $30 million or more to launch and build a fourth communications satellite, the government-established private corporations would really like to issue the promised $30 million in common shares to the public, according to Telesat President Dave Golden.

But even with the obvious financial need for such a share offering, Telesat has been advised that the stock market just wouldn't accept such an issue, Golden added in an interview.

While Telesat has proven to be much more profitable than anyone expected in the five and a half years since it was established by Parliament, it still doesn't offer the investment opportunities that the market, in its current depressed state, would demand, he suggested.

Last summer, Telesat paid its first dividend of 10 cents a share to its shareholders: the federal government, with half the issue share, and participating telecommunications common carriers, with the other half.

The 10 cent a share dividend works out to a one per cent return on investment, Golden noted.

When the bill to create Telesat was being considered by Parliament, the government promised that ultimately one-third of the private corporation's shares would be sold to the public.

To date, Telesat President Dave Golden holds the only issued public share.

With the federal government's intention to lease channels on the planned fourth Telesat satellite will reinforce the tradition whereby most of Telesat's conventional business is with its shareholders.

Indians to Fight Coal Plant

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the American Indian Movement and the Confederated Indian Authority said Wednesday that members of Indian warrior societies from all over North America are coming to British Columbia to resist the Hat Creek thermal-electric project in the B.C. Central Interior.

Spokesman Bill Joe said that if the project announced recently by Resources Minister Bob Williams goes ahead, "There will be a Waterloo."

He said AIM leader Vern Belcourt is coming from Minnesota to marshall resistance to the coal-fired project, located next to two Indian reserves in he Thompson Canyon area.

The Confederation protested the Williams announcement on grounds it would destroy a large amount of grazing land and fisheries.

"To finish us off the mill will produce 400 tons of deadly sulphur dioxide daily and disseminate a good percentage into the atmosphere," the confederation says in a wire to the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs.

Bank Officer Resigns

VANCOUVER (CP) — J. A. Ellis, the Bank of Montreal's senior officer in Vancouver, has resigned as vice-chairman of the bank in charge of British Columbia, but will remain a member of the board of directors.

Ellis announced his departure in a letter to several senior businessmen in Vancouver.

Ellis and Robert J. Kayser, the bank's senior vice-president for B.C. and the Yukon, could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Since March, 1974, Ellis also has been chairman of the Canada Development Corporation, which has its head office in Vancouver.

Ellis, who is 60, joined the Bank of Montreal in 1933. He came to Vancouver in 1964 as general manager, B.C. division. He became senior vice-president in 1967, executive vice-president in 1971 and was named vice-chairman in 1973.

Reserves Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reserves of industrialized countries increased by $2.7 billion during October, the International Monetary Fund reported Tuesday.

Digest

Reader's Digest Association Canada Ltd. reports an unaudited net loss of $35,654 or 3.7 cents a share for the quarter ending Sept. 30, compared to net income of $287,697 or 29.8 cents a share in the corresponding period last year.

The company said sales revenue improved by about $312,000, but increased operating costs of about $962,000 more than offset the gain.

Treasurer Bruce G. Woodcock said increased expenses resulted primarily from start-up of a new magazine press, promotion investment and inflation.

Woodcock said prospects for this year are less favorable than last year because of the general economic slowdown and the federal government's intention to implement a law eliminating tax deductions for companies advertising in non-Canadian magazines.

In addition, the recent postal strike halted direct mail sales activity, he said.

Majestic

Majestic Wiley Contractors Ltd. reports net income of $2,499,000 or 30.2 cents a share for the nine months ended September 10.

Comparative figures for 1974 indicate a net loss of $1,394,000, or 16.8 cents a share for the first nine months of 1974.

Total revenue for the first nine months of this year was $75,694,000, compared with $17,198,000 in 1974.

Company President V. N. Osadhuk said the company received contracts to load, haul and string 170 miles of 30-inch diameter pipe on the Sarnia-Montreal pipeline.

He said Trancanada Pipelines has awarded Majestic Wiley a contract to build four riveh crossings in Ontario and Quebec and construction of 48 miles of natural gas pipeline in the Cornwall area.

Cyprus

Earnings of Cyprus Anvil Mining Corp. for the third quarter were higher than in the 1974 third quarter, but for the first nine months of 1975 were lower than in 1974, the company says in a report to shareholders.

Third quarter earnings were $4 million or 54 cents a share, compared with 3.4 million or 46 cents last year. Nine months earnings were $7.4 million or $2.28 a share, compared with $20.5 million or $2.70 a share in 1974.

The report, signed by President John Bruk, said labor negotiations are continuing with the aid of a conciliation officer following a meeting of the company and union in Ottawa to clarify problems of anti-inflation guidelines.

T-Mountain Pipe

Trans Mountain Pipe Line Company Ltd. reports net profits for the first nine months of 1975 ended Sept. 30 of $8.8 million, or $1.16 a share, compared with $11.7 million, or $1.54 a share for a corresponding period in 1974.

Gross income for the first nine months of 1975 was $33.7 million, compared with $40 million for 1974.

Trans Mountain is a Vancouver-based petroleum products transmission company.

Firestone Tire

Sales and earnings slumped in the fourth quarter, capping a year of slightly increased sales with an over-all drop in profits, Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. said.

Final-quarter earnings totaled $58.57 million or $1.03 per share on sales of $1.04 billion, compared with the previous fourth-quarter net income of $66.87 million of $1.18 per share on sales totalling $1.1 billion, the firm said.

Q. Broadcasting

Q Broadcasting has reported a net profit for fiscal year 1975 of $334,653 or 79 cents a share, compared with $200,251 or 47 cents a share in 1974.

The company operates Vancouver radio stations CHQM AM and FM, radio and television stations in Prince George, and a background music service.

The company said considerable sums were invested during 1975 to upgrade television broadcasting facilities with addition of color cameras and video tape recording equipment.

T.C. Glass

Trans-Canada Glass reports net income before an extraordinary item for the nine months ended Sept. 30 of $1.2 million or $1.01 a share, compared with $916,873 or 76 cents a share for the corresponding period in 1974.

The extraordinary item reported was a gain of $331,231 on sale of property, which added 2 cents a share to the latest period.

Trans-Canada said it had sales of $20 million for the period, compared with $18.2 million for the same period last year, and a 33-per-cent increase in net income.

Inland

Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd. reports an unaudited loss of $839,513 for the three months ended Sept. 30, compared with a loss of $526,609 for the corresponding period in 1974.

Income for the same period was $4.2 million, down from the $5.2 million reported for 1974.

The deficit for each common share was reported at 30 cents, compared with 19 cents for 1974.

R. L. Cliff, chairman of the Vancouver-based natural gas transmission company, told the annual shareholders' meeting that "the inflationary spiral that has grabbed at all of us has proven to be too big for Inland to handle by internal growth.

Paperwork Mounts Despite Computer

By DARWIN FEDORICK
P. S. ROSS & PARTNERS

MANAGEMENT MEMO

Why paperwork? Generally speaking, the intention is to keep a record or to inform. Paper replaced payrus and stone tablets as a means of storing data. More recently, microfilm, punch cards, computer tapes and microdots have become the data storage technologies.

As a method of informing, paper now competes with the telephone, the telex, the TV screen, and the computer — yet despite these new technologies the avalanche continues.

Has the computer produced more or less paper? In early years the capacity of the computer was expressed in equivalent clerical hours. As a substitute for paperwork it has extended our capacity to process and store data, but the completion of forms and other clerical efforts that are now necessary for the input and output of the computer process have resulted in an absolute increase in paperwork.

But what does all this paperwork cost the individual or the organization? Few would question management's need for timely and relevant information or the importance of keeping track of its actions through what is generally referred to as an accounting and information system. But others must also be kept informed — employees, suppliers, customers, shareholders, and government. The paperwork required to satisfy their needs has been growing — so has the cost.

Accounting clerks, ledgers, invoices, cheques, payroll systems, programming, computer centres, budgets, monthly reports and draft monthly reports, and the notes we jot down for ourselves and others on scratch pads — all are part of what we call the accounting and information system. For the medium-sized business the annual cost of this system can be in the millions, but because these costs are seldom reported in total they are difficult to control.

Although computer equipment can be costly, it generally does not exceed eight per cent of the total accounting and information cost. The vast proportion of the total cost (75 per cent to 80 per cent) is usually in the salaries of those who collect and prepare the information. The remaining portion of the costs is insignificant; office space may represent about six per cent, supplies three per cent and communication equipment about four per cent. Accounting and information about customers and employees represent almost half of the total cost. This generally depends on the type of business, but sales and payrolls are usually the most costly record-keeping activities.

The efficiency of paperwork can be measured against a variety of yardsticks. For example, is the cost of information a reasonable percentage of sales dollars? What is the cost per employee in the company? What percentage of all employees is involved in the accounting and information activity? What proportion of total cost is applicable to automated v. manual systems? How much time do managers spend analyzing and reading reports? In what parts of the organization are major information costs incurred? The answers to these questions can be compared from one year to the next to help control rising costs. This kind of analysis will also assist management to plan new systems, monitor automation costs, organize the accounting function more effectively and begin to evaluate the benefits of the information produced.

The approach to determining the accounting and information cost is simple. Since the formal accounting system doesn't provide the answer a "bootleg" system is used and estimates made. For example, identify those areas in the organization which are likely to generate paper and decide which elements of cost you need to know (salaries, equipment, supplies, rent, etc.). Prepare a reporting format to present and analyze the date when it is collected; circulate this report as a survey; collect the survey forms, ensuring that all are completed and accounted for; add up the numbers and be prepared for a surprise. The figures won't be accurate, but they'll be close enough to tell you that the cost of paperwork exceeds the value of the information you are getting.

NO MORE DELAYS, KENNECOTT TOLD

NEW YORK (AP) — Kennecott Copper Corp., ordered by the federal government four years ago to divest itself of its Peabody Coal Co. unit, was told last week by the Federal Trade Commission no more delays will be granted.

The FTC SPECIFICALLY DENIED Kennecott's request, made Oct. 14, for a six-month extension of time to present the government with a plan to sell or otherwise rid itself of Peabody. Kennecott was ordered four years ago to do so on anti-trust grounds.

The FTC specifically denied Kennecott's request, means the copper producer now stands in violation of the commission's divestiture plan deadline of Oct. 1. The regulatory agency told Kennecott it may seek to enforce its order, but would have to get court permission before penalties were imposed.

Meanwhile, International Nickel Co. of Canada said capital spending this year will be about $100 million short of the $400 million originally budgeted. A company spokesman said the firm plans to use the difference to build up its nickel inventories to a four or five-month supply instead of the normal two-month stockpile.

The aim is to weather the current market slump without having to undergo a sharp production cubtack, a company official said.

Footwear Prices Rising

TORONTO (CP) — An officials of the Canadian Importers Association warned Monday that Canadians may soon be paying more for footwear.

David Miller, chairman of the association's footwear import committee, said federal Trade Minister Don Jamieson is considering raising tariffs on footwear at a time when Canadian business has been asked to avoid unnecessary price increases.

"The consequence of such an action will force the price of footwear in the market place even higher and, once again, the consumer will be forced to bear the burden."

Miller sent a telegram to Prime Minister Trudeau and senior cabinet ministers asking for an early meeting with the association to discuss the possibility of lowering tariffs on footwear.

Vancouver Refinery Didn't Sweeten Pot

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Sugar Refinery Co. Ltd. has reported a 3.5-per-cent increase in earnings to $9,179,000 or $3.76 a share for the year ended Sept. 30, 1975, but for the second consecutive year the company's sugar refinery in Vancouver did not contribute to profits.

Net earnings in the 1974 fiscal year were $8,865,000 or $3.62 a share. Sales were $162.4 million in the latest fiscal period, up from $159.3 million last year.

B.C. Sugar's Vancouver operation, which refines imported raw sugar, has been closed since June 2 by a strike by the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union. There are no negotiations at present.

At a news conference Tuesday, company president Peter Cherniavsky said 68 per cent of 1975 earnings came from sugar operations, and the balance from non-sugar activities such as beet pulp, molasses, fertilizer and Belkin Packaging Ltd., 50 per cent owned by B.C. Sugar.

Cherniavsky said from the high in the world raw sugar price of 650 pounds sterling a long ton, equal to about 65 cents a pound reached in November, 1974, the price had dropped to 159 pounds sterling or 16 cents a pound at Sept. 30 this year and has fallen slightly further since.

"I can't see sugar prices going much lower — a severe drop would have an adverse effect on world production," Cherniavsky said.

Commenting on the local situation, Cherniavsky said that if the company's Vancouver refinery were operating, the company would undersell United States sugar by $2 a 100 pound bag at the refinery.

"At the retail level I would suggest a B.C. Sugar 10-pound bag might be $2.60, compared with most U.S. sugar which is $2.99," he said.

Cherniavsky said the company made an offer Oct. 10 to the union for about a 28-percent increase in a one-year contract. This would have produced a basic rate of $6.80 an hour and a rate for skilled trades of $8.45 per hour.

At a union meeting Oct. 14 the members rejected the offer.

'75 Ice Capades Need Some Skate Sharpening

By RICHARD OVENDEN

Ice Capades opened to a good crowd Wednesday night in Victoria but the troupe might do well to sharpen its skates a bit to keep packing 'em in at Memorial Arena.

The show obviously has more flash and sparkle than it has for the past two years since world skating champ Karen Magnussen signed up. Sets, lighting and costumes are all arrayed more crisply and a slimmer Karen looks more like she's got her heart in it.

But by trying to provide value by stretching the frosty frolics to 2½ hours — excluding the 15-minute break — the producers have created a lag.

The keen antics of veteran comic Freddie Trenkler; the addition of Lucien Mayer and his skating chimps and the acrobatic five-member Fenton Family appeal to kids of all ages.

Problem is overabundance of pairs and line precision drills set to popular, music hall and classic themes — overlaid with a pat and plastic taped-commentary.

Pop-Pourri, Touch of Classe, Let's Get It On are all dazzling on terms of scale and glitter alone — but there was plenty of duplication of skating skills and the producers might well have given more ice time to Magnussen's individual talents since she is used so heavily to promote the show.

Richard Ewell, the first black to win the U.S. Junior Men's Figure Skating Championship, took the icing off Karen's cake with the night's most solid individual display in several acts.

The California skater, along with newcomer Melissa Militano, were given the exposure needed to demonstrate the full range of their abilities.

Christmas Every Day, a children's novelty jammed with outsized Swiss dolls, marionettes, seals and Santas offered a seasonal treat to youngsters too young to appreciate fine skating form.

Perhaps (though somewhat ideally) Ice Capades producers could jam-pack the pre-intermission period with kids stuff, giving adults the option of taking in the second half.

As it stands now it is worthwhile entertainment — but not outstanding for either young or old.

FOUR CRITICS ON PLAN

Only four residents appeared before the Capital Regional Board Wednesday to criticize various aspects of a proposed community plan for View Royal.

They attacked the manner in which the plan was assembled, a suggested bypass road along the route of the E & N railway and population densities but most also had some kind words for the plan.

Dick Faulks, a machinist living at 196 Werra, said zone change applications should be frozen until the plan is in operation. He also said any road development in View Royal should have a low priority until public transit has been developed because it should ease traffic flow.

John White, 309 View Royal Ave., said the original draft of the plan, prepared with considerable public participation, was changed radically by planners without any explanations offered for the changes.

While the current plan has been amended back to something close to the original plan, can planners impose their values, he asked.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said White's complaint has been noted.

Ann Freisinger, 126 Burnett, said a suggested bypass along a rail route would wipe out 12 years of work on her family's property.

Capt. Rod Trail, 125 Kingham Place, said he also opposed the idea of the bypass. President of the View Royal Ratepayers Association, he was also opposed to population densities of up to 16 living units per acre in multi-dwelling zones provided for in the plan.

The board has given second reading to the bylaw encompassing the plan. It requires provincial approval before the board can finally pass it.

More than $8,500 in photogaphic equipment was stolen from Sooter Studio at 768 Yates, last Thursday.

A studio employee said the theft was discovered Friday morning and every piece of equipment was taken from the back of studio. Nothing else was touched, she sai,d including some cash sitting in the front register.

Two blocks away, the Goodwill Enterprises at 560 Yates was also hit by burglars over the weekend.

Manager Gerry Keeler said about $25 in coins was taken from the store's building fund donation box. The lid of the store's safe was broken, although the burglars did not get into it, and some keys were also taken.

"It was really more the inconvenience of having to get the safe repaired and the locks replaced," said Keeler.

Cablevision Petition Launched

Protests against possible changes in local cablevision dial settings may be made in a petition being circulated for submission to the Candian Radio-Televison Commission.

Reports have suggested the opening of two new TV statons in Vancouer and a second channel for Victoria by 1979 could require several U.S. stations received by local cablevison to be allocated to mid-channel positions on subscriber's sets.

That would mean the addition of $50 converter to each subscriber's set to make possible cable reception of such stations ast KING KVOS, KOMO and KCTS.

Mrs. Sybil Bateman, 1147 Quadra, said about 1,000 names had been collected for her petition in less than a week, and she asked that further requests to be included in the protest be mailed to her.

Sea Boundary Set ... 23 Years Later

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

After 23 years, the city of Victoria is finally going to notify the citizenry where the city's seaward boundaries lie.

City council today authorized city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to rectify a minor oversight which, since 1952, has left the ocean limits of Victoria in a sort of vague unspecified limbo.

De Villiers explained to the Times that the omission came to light recently when he was overhauling some ancient statutes and searching for a precise definition of the city's limits.

He said the boundaries were first established when the city was incorporated by an act of the colonial legislature in 1862. But at that time they included the word "shoreline," for which no legal definition exists in either English or Canadian law.

A further provincial act of 1936 gave municipalities the power to extend their boundaries seaward, but it was not until 1948 that Victoria decided to take up the offer.

In that year the city passed a bylaw extending the limits "to include the adjoining foreshore and any area below low water mark which is deemed necessary or desirable."

So far so good. But for the bylaw to become effective three things had to happen:

It had to be published in a local newspaper, the approval of the lieutenant-governor had to be obtained, and notification of that approval had to be published in the official Gazette.

Steps 1 and 2 were followed, even if it took four years for the lieutenant-governor's approval to come through in 1952, but then things started to come unstuck.

De Villiers said the records of the municipal affairs department indicate the order-in-council was duly forwarded to City Hall in May of that year. But there is no record that it was ever received by the city.

(No spokesman was immediately available to say whether a postal strike was in progress at the time).

But now all the proper formalities will be observed. And if any of us have innocently overstepped the limits in the past 23 years, perhaps we should ask those concerned to forgive us our trespasses.

Life Without a Steak? —The Vegetarian View

(Columnist Scott has been told by his doctor to take things easy for a couple of weeks and to give up his column temporarily. So, while he is away the Times will reprint some of the columns from past years which readers enjoyed.)

It seemed a moderately witty notion, in view of the current alarms over the high cost of meat, to look into the possibilities of becoming a vegetarian and I wish someone would break both my arms when I get these ideas.

I had enlisted the help of the two couples I know who eat no meat, as a dietary way of life, warning them that my interest was mainly if not entirely journalistic, and before you could say "medium rare" my desk was groaning under the weight of periodicals, tracts, studies, surveys and books that may just possibly be the most persuasive of any ever printed.

I should say right here at the beginning that the very idea of Bean Burgers, Peanut-Sesame Loaf Supreme, Nutty Noodle Casserole, Vegetarian Enchiladas, Savory Onion Quiche and Crunchy Granola causes my taste buds actual physical pain, but the arguments for vegetarianism are so downright compelling that it may be weeks before I can bite into a small steak without feeling guilt. It may be weeks before I can afford one, too, but that's beside the point.

If there is a degree of fanaticism in the vegetarian's arguments or a tendency to become evangelical it is only because both of the principal reasons for embracing it make a lot of sense.

With some, you see, it began with a revulsion over the killing of innocent beasts for human consumption ("this gnawing and slobbering over animal flesh," as one puts it), but there are many more who, less emotionally, have given up flesh to search consciously for a diet pattern that will offer something more sensible than our present food consumption ("the malnutrition of gluttony" as another describes the way we eat).

It's not an easy way to go, in either case, as an alternative. You do not simply pop some nuts into your mouth or spoon in some yogurt. It requires an encyclopedic knowledge of nutrients and some imaginative improvising to provide a menu that won't be dull.

Both the wives I've consulted agree that shopping and the preparation of meals are more time-consuming and demanding than they are for the woman who simply obeys her whims in the supermarket. That probably explains why there's a wide variety of literature on the subject, one book, "Diet For A Small Planet" by Frances Moore Lappe, being required reading.

The aim is to find that magic formula of proteins, the building bricks of body tissues, that will check the more or less constant process of breaking down and wearing out that, it seems, happens to your poor old body and mine.

The vegetarians say — and demonstrate only too well — that we over-indulge in carbohydrates and refined sugars, that we're "starch-eaters and the sugar-babies" existing on a diet that makes fat and flab, weak hearts and under-sized muscles. One of the meaner spokesmen of the breed has described the way we eat as similar to running a Rolls-Royce on paraffin.

The soya bean, the peanut, the sunflower seed and yeast aren't simply substitutes for protein meat, but are richer in protein content, pound for pound, than anything you'll find at your friendly neighborhood butcher's.

Harcourt Roy, the most articulate guru of the non-meat-eaters, put it all very succinctly and with that characteristic enthusiasm that I have found almost irresistible: "Your long-term aim is to reduce the starches and sugars, increase the proteins, plus, of course, the vitamin-rich fruits, vegetables and salads. Your body will love you for it. In fact, you'll feel so frisky that you will have to check your birth certificate to find out if you really are the same person. You could become a menace."

With many, of course, it goes deeper than that. They see the day when the continued use of the cow, calf, steer, pig and chicken will simply be so uneconomical that they'll be obsolete. Canada Packers can't say they haven't been warned.

Edward T. Banks, another immensely persuasive writer on the subject, says, "The world will not be able to sustain life, at the present rate of population expansion, by means of the wasteful method of providing something like eight tons of vegetable food for an animal in order to produce one ton of chemicalized meat."

It's a point that's a kind of catechism with vegetarians — they'll tell you, for example, that the world acreage of food production lands could be doubled if we relied on growing rather than grazing—but down deep they've a realistic pessimism.

The fact they recognize is that most of us are disinterested in diet for purely nutritional reasons, that we've a kind of sensual pleasure in eating, dictated by habit and custom, that we're push-overs for the taste manipulators, slaves to a sizzling steak, whatever the cost, and I am very much afraid that they are right.

Youth Burned By Gas

Fourteen-year-old Richard Menno Pruim of 391 Conway learned the hard way Wednesday night that a person shouldn't light a match while handling gasoline.

And today the youth's in Victoria General Hospital burn unit with second degree burns to his stomach and thighs. Hospital officials say he's in good condition.

According to Saanich fire chief Harold Gain the youth was attempting to siphon some gas from a tractor shortly before 10 p.m. to get a fire going in the fireplace of his parents' home.

In doing so he spilled some gas on himself. He lit a match to see what he was doing. The gasoline burst into flames, igniting his clothing and setting fire to the tractor.

Gain said the youth threw himself on the ground and extinguished the fire in his clothing by rolling in the mud. He then ran towards the house 100 yards away calling out to his brother William, 17, inside watching TV, that the tractor was on fire.

The boys grabbed some buckets, got water from a nearby creek and put out the fire in the tractor before firemen reached the scene.

The parents of the two boys left Victora 10 days ago for a month-long visit in Holland.

Gain said the John-Deere tractor was heavily damaged.

Morning Pace Hectic As Voters Rush Polls

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Voting ranged from heavy to very heavy during the first three hours of today's provincial election as a high percentage of the 150,891 local voters were expected to go to the polls in the Greater Victoria area.

"The voting is heavy everywhere," said W. H. Davis, assistant returning officer for the Victoria riding.

The line-ups at some polls were surprisingly large even before voting started at 8 a.m., he said.

The biggest rush was expected in the final hours before polls close at 8 p.m.

"There have been a number of complaints but a smaller number than could be expected. The voting is going quite smoothly considering the heavy turnout."

The complaints concerned political signs near polling stations.

By law, no political sign may be visible in the area of a polling station. The signs were mainly on lawns. Offending political parties promised to remove them immediately.

A large number of people discovered they were not on the voters list but this is not unusual in any election, Davis said.

If they were eligible to vote in some other riding, they could cast a ballot. It would be sealed and sent to the riding for counting.

At the office of the district registar of voters, the phone rang constantly as people wanted to know where to vote.

"People always seem to leave it to the very last minute," said Mrs. D. M. Ambrose, senior election clerk for the Greater Victoria area.

"Some of them are about to get into their car when they suddenly realize they don't know where they're going. It's just human nature I guess to leave things to the last minute."

John Smallwood, the district registrar of voters, spent the early hours going from poll to poll, making sure there were enough ballots and affidavits for those casting absentee votes.

People who believe they are eligible to vote can sign an affidavit and vote. The ballot will be held until eligibility is checked. If the voter is eligible, the ballot will be counted.

Polling stations close promptly at 8 p.m. but votes can be cast after that time by those inside the polling station.

"Anyone inside the station at 8 p.m. will be eligible to vote," Mrs. Ambrose said.

"However, if they are outside at 8 p.m. they will be too late."

(Information on where to vote is in the election roundup story on Page 1.)

The first election results will be broadcast on all B.C. radio and TV outlets shortly after 8 p.m.

STUDY IN STUDS caught by Times photographer John McKay only goes to show that even construction sites have a certain beauty. Elderly pedestrian plods along a two-by-four tunnel which provides a cathedral-like perspective to the Government Street sidewalk alongside the Harbor Square development.

TOO MUCH UNION, DIRECTOR QUITS

George Duck, the city of Victoria's representative on the Gorge Road Hospital board for several years, has resigned because he says he's fed up with the emphasis on union matters in board discussions.

In his letter of resignation submitted to today's city council meeting, Duck says: "In past years we were always concerned with patient care and the improvement of our buildings and grounds for the benefit of both patients and the community.

"Now we spend most of our time deliberating on union and staff problems; especially their demands for money."

Duck says he will not be a party to "this continual taking from the public purse on an annual basis, with no increase in responsibility or performance."

Seven Honorary Citizens

Contributions to the social and cultural life of the community were recognized today when seven persons received honorary citizenship certificates from Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

The presentations at this afternoon's regular council meeting, one of Pollen's last civic duties before he vacates the mayor's chair, were made to:

Victoria Times columnist Elizabeth Forbes, who has written a regular column for the newspaper since 1964, when she retired after more than 20 years as women's editor;

Donald Gray, in recognition of his many years' work organizing Silver Threads variety concerts;

Mrs. Madge Hamilton, former assistant provincial archivist and authority on the city's heritage buildings.

William Ireland, former provincial archivist and provincial librarian;

Internationally-known wildlife artist Fenwick Lansdowne, whose paintings of birds are displayed in some of the great museums of the world;

Mrs. Annie McVie, for her service to senior citizens;

Mrs. Winifred Scott Wood, distinguished pianist and vice-principal of the Conservatory of Music.

Chancellor Voting Starts Next Week

Ballots will be sent out next week to 7,000 University of Victoria graduates, faculty and elected officials for election of a UVic chancellor.

The mail strike delayed the vote, but UVic registrar Ron Ferry said today ballots will be sent out as soon as the mail backlog clears next week. Deadline for vote returns is Jan. 9.

The term of incumbent Robert Wallace will continue until that time.

Wallace, 69, has been associated with UVic and Victoria College for 47 years.

His challenger, Dr. Robert Wright, 68, of Vancouver, was head of the B.C. Research Council for 26 years, prior to his retirement in 1972.

Star Status Cuts No Ice in Show Biz

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

When an amateur competition skater thinks about turning professional she has dreams of a star's life — sleeping late, being her own boss.

Gone will be the days of rigorous work and discipline.

But it's not in the least like that, says Canadian world champion and Ice Capades star Karen Magnussen.

Now within a few months of concluding her first contract with Ice Capades, Karen says after turning pro you become more obligated more than ever before.

You get less sleep, have to be super-careful of the amount you eat, and have almost no time to yourself.

"I do almost twice as much skating as anyone else in the company" she says. "I alternate among the three companies that are on the road and often have to learn numbers in a very short space of time."

In 75 days Karen has had seven days off and those were not consecutive.

She skates every day she's not traveling — three times on Saturdays, twice on Sundays. "You never get to sleep much before 2 a.m. and are certainly not expected to get sick."

After the competition environment where she was a rare and in a sense, pampered being, the professional life turned her into an automaton, a sort of property, Karen says.

"Line skaters and principals alike, we're all weighed in every Saturday," she says. "Two pounds grace are allowed but if a skater gains more, two pounds must be lost by the next Saturday or a $10 fine is levied.

"That's particularly hard on the line skaters because their pay is small and they have to foot the bills for their own accommodation and meals. It also means the kids tend to stuff themselves at the beginning of the week and starve the rest of the time."

Still Karen accepts the life cheerfully and matter-of-factly. There is a thoroughly common-sense side to the 23-year-old champion's warm and natural personality.

"I only have a certain number of precious years," she says. "It's necessary that I make the most of them.

"I want more than anything to stay Canadian but it's discouraging to find how little interest there is in sustaining Canadian talent at home."

She and her manager, she explains, have the concept of a Canadian television special on skating, but while potential sponsors express enthusiasm for the idea, that's as far as it goes. No good reasons are given for not taking it up.

"The disinterest is general," she says, "and every year we lose so many of our best performers to the United States."

Spending more than 10 months of the year on tour is a good deal more than Karen would do if she had her way. She would like to tour about 20 weeks — and Canadian cities only, except for a possible two or three Pacific Coast U.S. cities.

In the American mid-west and southern centres, she finds baseball and football take all the limelight.

"You work your heart out in arenas half filled with people who have small understanding of the skater's art."

What's in the cards when she gives up touring? Well so far she plans to teach and coach, ski a lot and maybe open a sporting goods store because of her practical interest in equipment.

She has already influenced a skating boot design which CCM is bringing out under her name.

Travel and time factors virtually rule out hobbies but she is a collector. And her specialty? Skating memorabilia: old skates, blades, books about skating or any historic item on the subject.

Her biggest wish at the moment is for more free time to spend in the seaview home she has bought at Sechelt and to fulfil offers to commentate at competitions and accept other international invitations.

And she would like to be at home in Vancouver with her family for their traditional Scandinavian Christmas Eve gathering. But that's not possible because Ice Capades always performs somewhere on Christmas Day and this year she must be in Spokane by Dec. 24.

'NONSENSICAL' CHANGES AT CENTRE UNDER FIRE

Langford regional director Earl Pallister said Wednesday that "nonsensical" construction changes at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre are costing taxpayers thousands of dollars.

His comment came as the Capital Regional Board debated a $168.65 bill for extra work at the new $1,000,000 curling rink.

Directors were told bill was for revising a rear fire exit. While the fire marshal in Vancouver had approved a width of 5 feet 3 inches, the local assistant fire marshal had insisted on a width of 6 feet.

The debate came to an abrupt halt when the board was told the work had already been done. Payment was approved.

But Ron Dumont, retiring director from Sooke, said the issue should not be allowd to die because there was an estimated $28,000 in additonal costs from such changes at the $630,000 Sooke arena now under construction.

He'd Share Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Owner Carroll Rosenbloom of Los Angeles Rams said Wednesday that if Buffalo's Ralph Wilson is fined for criticizing National Football League officiating, he'd like to pay half of it.

Wilson, owner of the Bills, sharply censured an official's call when Buffalo lost ot Miami Dolphins 31-21 last Sunday and were eliminated from the playoffs.

Mercury Morris of Miami apparently fumbled deep in his own territory with about nine minutes left and Buffalo trailing, 24-21. Defensive end Pat Toomay of the Bills recovered at the Miami 28. The ball was ruled dead, Toomay was called for elbowing an official, and the Bills were penalized.

Rosenbloom, recovering from heart surgery, said he wired Wilson asking to pay half of any fine assessed by the NFL for criticism of officiating.

"If he is any kind of man, he's got to give me that privilege," declared the Rams owner, who had owned Baltimore Colts prior to coming to Los Angeles.

"When a man gets robbed like that, he must give me part of the action. I know the feeling. I have lost two major playoff games because of bad officiating. I suffered in silence and I wound up with a coronary.

"Wilson will, too, if he doesn't say something."

Rosenbloom referred to a questionable field goal call in the Colts' 13-10 loss to Green Bay Packers in the 1965 NFL conference playoff and to another call in last season's Rams-Minnesota Vikings NFC title game.

Thomas Shows Forum Fans

By The Canadian Press

Wayne Thomas played his first game on Montreal Forum ice in two years Wednesday night and the soft-spoken Toronto Maple Leafs goaltender said it was probably his best ever in Montreal.

Thomas, acquired by the Leafs from Montreal in a trade during the off-season, blocked 35 shots, helping Toronto to a 3-3 tie with the Canadiens in one of six National Hockey League games played.

In other action, Buffalo Sabres and New York Rangers battled to a 2-2 tie, Detroit Red Wings nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2, Chicago Black Hawks bombed Washington Capitals 7-2, Los Angeles Kings topped St. Louis Blues 5-0 and Philadelphia Flyers tied California Golden Seals 1-1.

Guy Lapointe deflected John Van Boxmeer's shot from the right point with 3:52 remaining in the third period to give Montreal its tie, preserving the Canadiens' unbeaten string at the Forum. The Canadiens are the only team in the NHL without a loss on their home ice this season and now have a 10-0-4 record at the Forum.

Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Lemaire scored the other Montreal goals. Jim McKenny scored in the first period for the Leafs with Lanny McDonald getting two in the second to give Toronto a 3-1 lead going into the final period.

"We kind of laid back in the third period and they came on," said Thomas, who sat out the 1974-75 season as Montreal's third-string netminder.

Thomas thought his best save came in the last minute of the second period when he stopped Peter Mahovlich.

"I enjoyed that save the most. I just waved my stick in the air and the puck hit it. I didn't even see who shot the puck.

"I nver really played that well in the Forum when I was with the Canadiens. I played well on the road when I was with Montreal."

In New York, Gilbert Perreault beat New York's John Davidson on the goaltender's stick side with a 40-foot shot for his 15th goal with seven minutes remaining in the third period to give the Sabres their tie with the Rangers.

Jacques Richard, was the other Buffalo scorer with Walt Tkaczuk and Jerry Holland replying for the Rangers.

The Red Wings snapped a three-game losing streak and extended their home-ice unbeaten record to six game with the win over Pittsburgh.

Mickey Redmond tipped in Rick Lapointe's with 5:21 remaining in the final period for the game-winning goal. Bill Hogaboam and Dennis Polonich were the other Detroit marksmen with Jean Pronovost and Lowell MacDonald replying for Pittsburgh.

MacDonald, shaken up in a first-period collision, left the game shortly after putting Pittsburgh ahead 3-2 with 38 seconds gone in the middle period. He ran into Detroit's Bryan Watson and suffered a possible broken thumb and an injured shoulder.

Dennis Hull had two goals and a pair of assists in Chicago's one-sided win over Washington.

Chicago's Grant Mulvey and Washington's Gordon Lane were assessed fighting majors at 10:47 and 46 seconds later, Darcy Rota of the Hawks and the Caps John Paddock were chased for spearing and fighting.

Centre Marcel Dionne scored a goal in each period to bring his total to 20 for the year and Rogatien Vachon recorded his third shutout of the season leading the Kings to their fifth consecutive win.

In Oakland, defenceman Rick Hamvton scored his sixth goal of the year at 5:34 of the third period to give California its tie with Philadelphia. Bill Barber scored for the Flyers in the first period.

Speaking of Domes, Or: Olympic Tickets Anyone?

Some mid-week musings and glad you asked. The world's biggest pimple is situated in downtown New Orleans and it's also been called "the domedest thing you ever saw." It's the Louisiana Superdrome, that's what $163 million worth , seats 97,365, can absorb the 66,000-seat Houston Astrodome with room to spare and will probably never pay for itself.

If domed stadiums are the trend of the future, comlete with no rainouts or weather problems, how noble can these domes get?

The Olympic Stadium in Montreal has been much in the news these days and may even be noticed on the skyline now, but will it be a dome or not — that is the new $40 million question? There is some doubt even that it will be ready for the Olympics which is why Olympic president Lord Killanin is keeping the hot line open to Mexico City. But tab that $400 million figure for what it's worth.

The Louisiana dome, for instance is 27 storeys high, and it got up there for less than $200 million. In Pontiac, Mich., Metropolitan Stadium was opened a few months ago. It seats 80,400 and cost only $55.7 million; and in Seattle, the Kingdome which will open next spring but won't have escalators in operation won't cost more than $60 million either.

Incidentally, the fact that Bill Veeck's purchase of the Chicago White Sox has been approved by the American League means that Seattle will have to look elsewhere, probably to Minnesota, if it hopes to have a franchise next season. That was the plan when the opening date for the Kingdome was set. Otherwise, a court case, pending since the Seattle Pilots' franchise was moved to Milwaukee after the ill-fated 1969 season, will be held in January. Pro football is all set, so is the name "The Seahawks" and all that is needed are the players.

But back to the Superdome. It was a victim of booboos from the very beginning. The foundations had to be rebuilt, changes in seating had to be made because 2,500 of the spectators would'nt have been able to see the four main scoreboards, there were at least two dozen lawsuits. All of which contributed to the jump in cost. And would you believe the original estimate. It was just $35 million.

So domes are mod, and promoters of all things are their greatest boosters. Not only is big-time professional sport attracted at whatever the cost of boosting civic egos but, with the vagaries of the weather no longer a concern, conventions, circuses, farm shows, religious gatherings and other extravaganzas just can't afford to pass up the many amenities these centres offer. Do the benefits outweight the costs? It probably will never be known but not in may cases is the obvious answer. For example, Bernard Levy, the excutive director of the Superdome has a sign posted in his office which bears repeating and reads: "When you are up to your ass in alligators, it's hard to remember that the original object was to drain the swamp."

Now, paging Jean Drapeau: or in Louisiana they ain't seen nothing yet! I suppose all Olympic ticket holders, particularly those who favor the swimming events, are aware of the possibility that the Olympic swim pool won't be ready on time. It's not that there won't be a swimming facility at the Games, if that occurs. That eventuality has been taken care of. But the real rib tickler is the fact that there were 10,000 tickets, or vouchers for that number, sold for the Olympic pool whereas the satellite site seats only 3,000. Could be kind of chummy, eh? But that's the norm. There have been 76,000 vouchers sold for the main stadium in Montreal too. The problem? There are only 66,000 seats.

Meanwhile, Richard Petty is the new king of the money makers in auto sport. Petty this season should take down about $500,000 for his year's work which would be a record. Al Unser held the previous high of $494,149, earned in 1947 and including a victory in the Indianapoolis 500 in his list of triumphs . . . Then there's Haystack Calhoun, a wrestler who has appeared here in the past. He had his automobile built to fit him and he pays fare and a half on the airlines . . . and now there's the hint that the tennis seniors are thinking of forming a world circuit. No! Rhomberg. No!

SLALOM WIN GIVES SWISS GIRL CUP LEAD

APRICA, Italy (Reuter) — Switzerland's Lise-Marie Morerod took the lead in women's World Cup ski standings today as she won a slamon event by clocking the fastest time on both runs.

Miss Morerod's total time was one minute 32.65 seconds, nearly three seconds faster than Rosi Mittermaier of West Germany whose combined time was 1:35.51.

Third was Italy's Claudia Giordani at 1:35.81.

Lauri Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., was the lone Canadian to complete both runs and was clocked at 1:45.72.

Fabienne Serrat of France took fourth place with a time of 1:36.88. She was followed by Daniele Debernard, France, 1:37.16; and Lindy Cochran, United States, 1:37.59.

Several leading skiers, including Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., fell and were eliminated during the first heat on the steep and icy course.

Bombers Bump Broncos To End Losing Streak

By The Canadian Press

A five-game losing streak for the Flin Flon Bombers ended Wednesday night on home ice as they cinched a 7-5 victory over the Lethbridge Broncos in a close Western Canada Hockey League game.

The Bombers negated the Broncos' 3-1 first-period lead by tying the score 3-3 at the end of the second. Flin Flon's Rick Gosselin broke a 5-5 tie in the third period with the winning goal.

In other WCHL action Wednesday, the eastern division's cellar dwelling Regina Pats earned a 6-6 tie with the division-leading Saskatoon Blades in a clash in Regina, while Calgary Centennial's goaltender, Jerry Price, helped his western division basement team to a 5-3 victory over the Kamloops Chiefs, high-flyers in the western division.

Kevin Marinos and Kelly Davis led the Bombers' attack with two goals each, while Kim Davis and Mark Davidson added singles.

John Hammond's goal at 19:01 of the third period assured the tie for the Pats, who fired 45 shots at Saskatoon's goaltender Randy Ireland. Regina goaltender Bob Leslie faced 35 shots.

Price, a little more than a week ago, stopped 43 shots to defeat Kamloops by one goal, and showed his mettle again in Wednesday's game by stopping 29 Kamloops drives. The Chiefs' netminder, Bryan Henderson, made 25 saves.

Centennials claimed their third straight victory on singles by newly-acquired Gary Rissling, who had a first-period power-play goal, Paul Enquist, Jerry Bancks, Rick Hodgson and Elmer Ray.

Barry Melrose, Dave Hatheway and Ryan Walter retaliated for the Chiefs.

Mom and Dad Nice —Away from Ice

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former minor hockey coach testified Wednesday that the parents of hockey player Greg Neeld are "wonderful people . . . away from the ice."

Vince Sita of North Vancouver made the statement in British Columbia supreme court before Mr. Justice J. C. Bouck at a libel suit against radio broadcaster Al Davidson of CKNW and Western Broadcasting Ltd.

Sita said he was a coach at North Shore Winter Club when Mr. and Mrs. Norman Neeld of West Vancouver were members. He said that Greg, now 20, tried out for his team, but signed with a Richmond team after his mother insisted Greg play on defence instead of at centre.

The Neelds "are known as avid hockey fans who do their best to promote their sons in sport," said Sita.

"Away from the ice they are wonderful people," he said. "Their problem is they don't believe the coaches are doing a good enough job with their sons."

The Neelds and Greg Neeld are suing Davidson and Western for general damages for a broadcast by Davidson on Dec. 17, 1973, the day it was decided in Toronto to remove Greg's left eye after he was injured in a junior game.

Davidson testified that he received calls from listeners stating that "they (the Neelds) deserved it." He agreed that he had broadcast that figure skater Karen Magnussen's parents had made a champion out of their daughter and that the Neelds did it their way and made thousands of bad friends and envious acquaintances.

He said that the negative portions of the broadcast were directed mainly at the parents.

Greg Neeld, who currently is attempting to gain a position with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association, told the court he sacrificed his childhood to hockey and is still dedicated to the pursuit of a professionl playing career.

Norman Neeld, an Air Canada pilot, admitted under cross-examination that his family had been expelled from the Winter Club in 1972 after he and his wife had clashed with a club hockey manager and a coach about two of their sons being dropped from a hockey team.

David Wesley Gill, a former Winter Club coach, said Mrs. Neeld used profanity in a confrontation about his own son and that she also tried to block his car from leaving the club.

Greg Neeld played hockey last season for Calgary Centennials, a junior team in the Western Canada Hockey league, and performed briefly for a Reno, Nev., team in the Southwest Hockey League in October before the league folded.

The trial continues.

SOVIETS SHOW VERSATILITY

OTTAWA (CP) — Moscow Selects scored their second victory of a Canadian tour Wednesday, defeating Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association major junior A series, 9-6.

It was a real display of team versatility for 5,044 fans in the 9,500-seat Civic Centre as nine players scored for the Russians, who Tuesday defeated Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the professional American Hockey league, 4-2.

It also was a revelation to the fans, used to rough and ready OHA junior hockey, as only eight penalties were called in the game — five of them to Russian players.

The game was clean and fast with the 67s able to stay with the Russians throughout despite early expectations they would be skated off the ice by the third period.

Boris Alexandrov, Valdimir Golikov and Serge Kotov gave the Russian team a 3-2 first period advantage before Vladimire Belousov, Alexander Kulikov and Baldimir Repmov scored unanswered goals in the second.

Ottawa actually outscored Russia in the third period. Goals for Russia went to Alexander Barinev, Valdimir Kovin and Alexei Volchenkov.

Ottawa goals were scored by Larry Skinner and Tom MacDonell in the first period and by Paul Gardiner, with two, Peter Lee and Bruce Baker in the third.

The Selects outshot the 67s 45-34 on the game — Bob Daley and Jim Fraser split Ottawa goaltending duties while Victor Doroshenko was in goal for the Selects.

An indication of the spirit shown by the 67s was when they weathered consecutive minor penalties in the first period and when Gardiner scored his second goal, the last of the game, with Vic Sirko serving a penalty and Ottawa a man short.

Sirko was one of four players — two forwards and two defencemen — picked up for the game from Oshawa Generals.

Blues Bombarded By Canadians

Perry Head and Darrel Ell hammered in three goals each Wednesday night to spark James Bay Athletic Association Canadians to a 10-1 triumph over Chemainus Blues in a Big Six Hockey League game at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Ken Mirreau added two goals for Canadians while single tallies were contributed by Bill Philips and Brian Preston. Frank Clark averted a shutout for the Blues.

No Suspension

RED DEER (CP) — A threat of suspension against the four Alberta teams in the Western Canada Hockey League has been withdrawn, an official of the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association said Wednesday.

"The WCHL has reversed its stand and provided the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association with assurances it will abide by all CAHA rules and regulations," said Stu Peppard of Calgary, AAHA vice-president.

Norm's 500th Steals Sheehy Act

It isn't often a hockey player scores four goals in a game and has to share the spotlight.

That's exactly what happened to Tim Sheehy of Edmonton Oilers, who had his four-goal game on the same night team-mate Norm Ullman joined hockey's exclusive 500-goal club.

Sheehy and Ullman helped the Oilers to a 7-4 win over the slumping Quebec Nordiques in a World Hockey Association game.

Ullman, who switched to the WHA this year after a 20-year stay in the National Hockey League with Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs, scored his ninth and 10th goals of the season in the third period after Quebec narrowed Edmonton's lead to one goal.

The Provost, Alta., native became the eighth player ever to score 500 major league goals in regular-season action, joining Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull , Frank Mahovlich Maurice Richard, Phil Esposito, Jean Beliveau and Johnny Bucyk.

In Wednesday's other games, Winnipeg Jets edged Toronto Toros 6-5 in overtime, New England Whalers edged Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 and Indianapolis Racers shaded Phoenix Roadrunners 2-1.

Ullman's career has come full circle since he played junior for Edmonton Oil Kings and turned professional with Edmonton Oilers of the old Western Hockey League in 1954-55.

The big league career that began the following season with Detroit appeared to be near its end last year when he saw limited duty with the Leafs and finished with nine goals and 26 assists, his lowest totals since his rookie year.

But the return to his native province seems to have given him a second wind. Thursday's goals gave him 35 points for the season, making him Edmonton's top scorer.

Sheehy, a former U.S. college star, got two goals in each of the first two periods to increase his output for the season to 15 and give Edmonton a 4-1 lead.

Winnipeg's Bobby Hull whistled a slap shot between the legs of Toronto goaltender Dave Tataryn in the first minute of overtime to give the Jets their win.

Tataryn, a rookie from Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, relieved starter Mario Vien in the first period and played another outstanding game.

James Bay Invincible But Nobody Told Vikings

RUGBY

max low

Rugby has become a bit too predictable here on Vancouver Island.

Coach Tillman Briggs knows, his players know and, indeed, the fans know: Mighty James Bay Athletic Association will overcome.

The Bays, defending B.C. champions and possibly the best club side in Canada, rarely leave much doubt in anyone's mind. Even if they fall behind in the early going, everyone knows they have the strength and have been drilled to such a degree that they can always storm back.

But it's gratifying to see that a "green" group of young players like the University of Victoria Vikings do not "know" the Bays are almost invincible on their home ground.

And the youngsters are not prepared to accept, beforehand, the premise that to take the field with James Bay automatically means defeat. Great! That's just what rugby — or, indeed, any game — is all about.

Last Saturday, when the Vikings went out in freezing weather to face the Bays at Macdonald Park, they had six first-year students on their team of 15. And most of the others — apart from playing-coach Ken Wilke, who at 26 is the "old man" of the side, and standoff-half Rick Couch — haven't had much experience, either.

Five of the six newcomers are regulars on the first team and the sixth — Grant McIntosh, a prop who played last season for St. George's School in Vancouver — was up from the Norsemen to fill in.

Most impressive so far of the first-year players are 18-year-old No. 8 forward Gary Grant, who UVic's head coach Howard Gerwing describes as "the find of the season," and winger Doug Ferne, a Canadian football player from Ottawa.

Grant, who played last year with the Kelowna Crows, is a fine open-field runner, a big, rangy player who works well in the loose with Wilke.

Ferne, who has good hands, a good boot and a tricky side-step, has added thrust to the wing.

The other new boys are hooker Charlie McLaughlin, who played for Shawnigan Lake Boys' School last year; Jim Buchanan, a second-row forward from Belmont High School, and Reg. Moore, a right winger who played last year for Saint Michael's University School.

With Gerwing watching from the stand and Wilke taking charge on the field, the young Vikings played with such vigor and determination that they stormed to a 4-0 lead on a try by centre Alistair Palmer.

The Vikings, in fact, led 4-3 until just before half-time when James Bay winger Rod Fiddick got the first of his two tries.

Although James Bay got stronger as the game went on, the Vikings refused to buckle. Thanks to some fine tackling all-round and a particularly plucky performance on defence by fullback Ian (Wee Man) Bruce, who at only five feet, seven inches and a mere 137 pounds is reckoned to be the lightest man playing first-class rugby in the province, UVic kept the game tight and the score a respectable 17-10.

Despite the cold, it was a great game, a fine effort. And the fans loved it.

11 City Players on B.C. Side

Eleven of the 23 players selected to the B.C. representative rugby side scheduled to tour the United Kingdom in mid-March were picked from the Victoria Union.

The balance of the side was chosen from Vanocuver-area clubs.

Six players — centre Stu Barber, scrum half Daryl Noulette, hooker Ray Rogers, prop Casey Walt, second-row forward Hans de Goede and No. 8 Gary Johnston — were drawn from provincial champion James Bay Athletic Association.

Centre Pat Simmons, winger Wes Thomas and prop Gaither Zinkan were selected from Cowichan, break Ken Wilke was picked from UVic Vikings and reserve Jim Wenman was chosen from Oak Bay.

Current or former players with the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds accounted for seven of the 12 Vancouver-area selections.

Fly-half John Billingsley, second-row forwards Rob Hindson and Dave Eburne as well as reserve Rob Greig were picked from the current side while fullback Barry Legh, winger Spence McTavish and hooker Warrick Harivel were selected from the Ravens, a club side composed of ex-UBC players.

Making up the rest of the team are scrum half Dennis Quigley of Ex-Brits, prop Chris Lefevre of Georgians and breaks Tony Scott of Capilanos, Tim Footman of Vancouver Rowing Club and Tom Freer of Trojans.

Seven other players, who won't be making the trip except as replacements, were named to an outside reserve list. They are Mick Eckardt and Chuck Shergold of James Bay, Barclay Logan of Cowichan, Bill Dunn of Capilanos, Jim Donaldson of Fraser Valley, Preston Wiley of UBC and Gillie Greig of Oak Bay.

Tilman Briggs of Victoria will coach the touring side.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Making eighth appearance in victory circle of Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition is stylish Evie Weinberger, winner of women's fivepin award in 10th week of 13th annual contest. Evie posted highest total in distaff division this season as she rolled games of 282, 370 and 255 for 907 series in Monday Classic League at Town and Country Lanes.

Relays Sunday

Approximately 50 teams from Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland are expected to compete in the Victoria Flying "Y" Track Club's seventh annual 21-mile mixed medley relays Sunday at Beacon Hill Park.

Teams must consist of at least four runners, at least eight years of age, from any sports club, school or organized group.

Further information and entry forms for the meet, which gets under way at 1 p.m., may be obtained from director Jack Hutchinson by telephoning 592-1837.

City Schools Will Host '76 B.C. Soccer Final

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Victoria will host the 1976 B.C. high school soccer championships and plans are already in the works to accommodate 16 teams expected to take part.

Henry Kuyvenhoven, chairman of the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League and coach of Reynolds Roadrunners, said this week a co-ordinator for the provincial tournament may be appointed at a meeting of city coaches next Tuesday at Reynolds.

"We'll have to make sure fields are ready and transportation and accommodation looked after," Kuyvenhoven said. "A co-ordinator will probably be appointed Tuesday and jobs delegated."

The tournament will take place in mid-November and, if it follows the same single-knockout foremat of past years, will start on a Thursday and end Saturday.

However, a number of coaches would like to see a double-loss elimination and Kuyvenhoven has been studying the idea as a possible proposal at the B.C. high school soccer association meeting next March.

"We have been talking about going to a double-knockout tournament starting Wednesday instead of Thursday," Kuyvenhoven said.

Under the single-loss elimination, tournament teams must play twice a day and Kuyvenhoven admits it would be almost impossible to increase that number.

The additon of one day to the tournament would accommodate a double knockout while keeping the limit at two games daily, but the added expense to out-of-town teams may make the idea too costly, Kuyvenhoven said.

One Gull Collects Six Goals

Barry McLachlan hammered in the first four and the last two goals of the game Wednesday night as Juan de Fuca Metro Toyota Gulls moved out of the South Island Junor "B" Hockey League cellar with a 9-2 victory over Fuller Lake Flyers.

Victory at Fuller Lake Arena moved Gulls one point ahead of Lake Cowichan Lakers, who dropped a 3-1 decison at home to Esquimalt Legion in another league game.

Pat Duncan, Perry Therrien and Dan Walushka scored the other Gull goals while Doug Simpson and Terry Ellison fired third-period tallies for Flyers.

Bruce Morrow, the Lake Cowichan netminder, made a total of 40 saves while allowing goals by Kevin Park, Gord Brooks and John Entzminger.

Mike Forrest scored the lone Laker goal on Esquimalt goalie Brock Davies, who made 25 stops.

Vikings Accurate

SASKATOON (CP) — Roger Ganes of Saskatchewan Huskies leads the Canada West University Athletic Association Men's Basketball League in scoring and rebounding, even though his team, which has lost all six of its games, is last.

Averaging 21.1 points per game with a total of 127 in six games, Ganes has a slim lead over Alberta Golden Bears' Doug Baker, who has 114 points for a 19.0-point average.

In rebounds, Ganes has pulled down 67 for an 11.1 average.

In other individual departments, Vikings' Lorne Dakin has hit on 29 of 57 field goal attempts for a 55.7-per cent mark, while teammate Jim Duddridge has clicked on 24 of 26 free throws for an impressive 92.3-per cent mark.

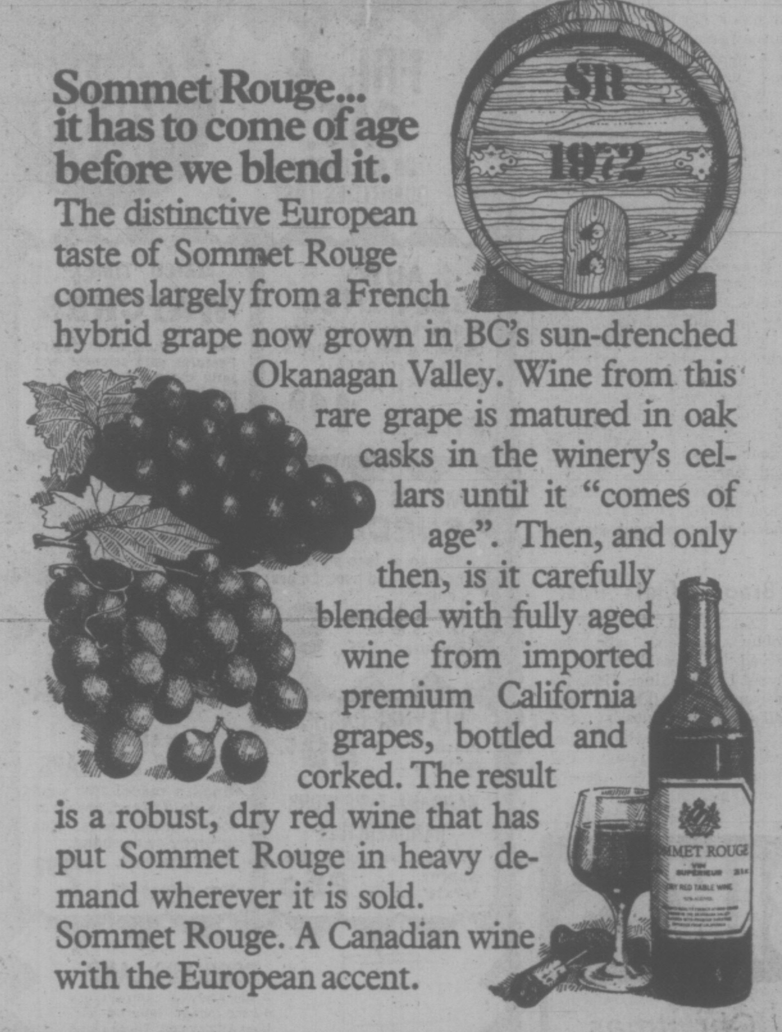
Two Rinks Share Lead

Ted Jurista ended Bob Gallaugher's unbeaten streak at three games in Super Curling League action at the Racquet Club this week with a 10-1 victory.

Steve Skillings' rink moved into a tie for first place with Gallaugher by edging Brad Clarke 6-5. Moe Hill defeated Lyle Garraway 8-4 in the other game. Gallaugher and Skillings lead with 3-1 records' Jurista is 2-1-1, Garraway 1-2-1, and Clarke and Hill 1-3.



Sommet Rouge... it has to come of age before we blend it.

The distinctive European taste of Sommet Rouge comes largely from a French hybrid grape now grown in BC's sun-drenched Okanagan Valley. Wine from this rare grape is matured in oak casks in the winery's cellars until it "comes of age". Then, and only then, is it carefully blended with fully aged wine from imported premium California grapes, bottled and corked. The result is a robust, dry red wine that has put Sommet Rouge in heavy demand wherever it is sold. Sommet Rouge. A Canadian wine with the European accent.

India Takes Tennis Lead

TOKYO (AP) — India took a 2-1 lead Wednesday over Japan in the Eastern Zone Davis Cup elimination round when brothers Anand and Vijay Amritraj came through with an expected doubles victory.

The Amritraj's beat the Japanese national doubles champions, Toshiro Sakai and Kenichi Hirai, 6-3, 4-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4.

India now needs to win one of today's reverse singles matches to send its team to Manila to play the Filipinos in the quarter-final rounds.

Veeck's Share Trimmed

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Bill Veeck is back in major league baseball, but not exactly the way he planned.

A Veeck group of about 40 people was approved Wednesday as the new owner of Chicago White Sox of the American League. But the 61-year-old Veeck wound up with little or no capital interest in the team.

Veeck disclosed that he had to sell much of the interest he would have received for putting the purchase package together, in order to raise the additional $1.2 million required for league approval.

The colorful Veeck actually winds up as president of the White Sox at a reported $65,000-a-year salary.

The majority stock (80 per cent) purchased from John Allyn for $9.75 million is owned by investors, including former home-run king Hank Greenberg and Bill DeWitt, one-time owner of the old St. Louis Browns and Cincinnati Reds. Allyn retains a 20-per-cent interest.

League approval of the Veeck group at the winter baseball meetings didn't come easily. It took two ballots by the owners before the necessary three-quarters vote was obtained.

League president Lee MacPhail confirmed that the hold-up arose because Veeck didn't conform to the league's stipulations after the owners turned down the group Dec. 3, demanding the extra $1.2 million in working capital.

While the American League solved one of its headaches, the National League met down the hall deliberating on what to do with the failing San Francisco Giants.

National League president Charles Feeney said his owners hope to have something definite on the Giants' situation today.

Representatives of two groups trying to acquire the franchise for Toronto also were on hand, along with a municipal delegation headed by Paul Godrey, chairman of Metropolitan Toronto council.

Franchise discussions didn't stop the ball clubs from continuing their trade action.

Chicago White Sox and Philadelphia Phillies made the most significant deal of the meetings. The Sox sent 20-game winner Jim Kaat, an American League all-star, to the Phillies for three young players, pitchers Dick Ruthven and Roy Thomas, and infielder-outfielder Alan Bannister, all No. 1 draft choices.

Earlier, Texas Rangers acquired pitcher Bill Singer from California Angels for first baseman Jim Spencer and a reported $100,000.

Reds Best in Fielding

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Cincinnati Reds, who had the most potent offensive in the National League last season, also played the best defence.

Fielding statistics released Wednesday show that the Reds made 102 errors, 25 fewer than Los Angeles Dodgers who finished second in the team defensive statistics. Cincinnati had a .984 fielding percentage to the Dodgers' .979.

Baseball's world champion Reds had 173 double plays, second to Montreal Expos who had 179.

Rail Rates Rapped

OTTAWA (FP) — An opposition MP said yesterday federal anti-inflation rules were being broken by Canadian National Railways' plan to raise commuter train fares in Montreal by 25 per cent.

However, Transport Minister Otto Lang appeared to reject that argument by telling the Commons the problem lies in the hands of the city of Montreal and the Quebec government.

"In general," he told Roch La Salle (PC-Joliette) "the problem which faces the railways is the significant loss on commuter services.

". . . In our view the problem is essentially one to be dealt with by provincial and municipal authorities."

However, he added that the matter was being discussed by officials from his department, from CN and from the city of Montreal.

CN announced Tuesday that early next year fares would be hiked by 25 per cent on two Montreal district commuter lines, and that there would be a service cutback on one of them in the spring.

J. F. Roberts, CN vice-president for the St. Lawrence region, said the railway would apply to the Canadian Transport Commission CTC for the increases because of rising deficits and declining use of the Montreal-Deux Montagnes and Montreal-St. Hilaire East commuter services.

Prime Minister Trudeau told LaSalle that regulations dealing with crown corporations and agencies would be prepared under the anti-inflation program.

He said the matter of crown-owned bodies had been discussed last week by federal and provincial finance ministers.

The regulations would soon be made public, Trudeau said, but did not say if they would effect the Montreal situation.

Lead Only In 7-Up Products

OTTAWA (CP) — The discovery of lead traces in canned soft drinks distributed by Seven-Up manufacturers does not invovle other companies, Health Minister Marc Lalonde said Wednesday.

Seven-Up recalled thousands of canned soft drinks last week after traces of lead were found in its products, including 7-Up, Diet 7-Up, Welch's Sparkling Grape Soda and Schweppes Mixes.

The problem apparently is limited to Seven-Up (Ontario) Ltd. and Seven-Up Montreal Ltd., Lalonde said in the commons.

However, federal health inspectors are carrying out checks on other companies as part of a continuous monitoring program started several years ago, he added.

MPs Attack Bill

By ALAN FREEMAN

OTTAWA (CP) — Oppositon MPs continued their attack Wednesday on a proposal to shorten the residency requirement for Canadian citizenship to theree years from five.

The shorter residency requirement will place a low value on Canadian citizenship, said William Scott (PC-Victoria-Haliburton).

Leonel Beaudoin (SC-Richmond) said an immigrant can live for three years on the margins of society without learning how to be a citizen. The five-year period was needed to find out more about the immigrant.

However, MPs welcomed other sections of the bill to make men and women equal under the Citizenship Act and allow 18-year-olds to apply for citizenship independently of their parents. The age limit now is 21.

The Commons turns today to a bill to limit the federal share of increased costs under provincial health insurance programs. (Bill Kempling (PC-Halton-Wentworth) said he thought the five-year residency period should be retained but he is willing to change his mind. He said the United States, Great Britain and France all have five-year waiting periods, an in Belgium the waiting period ranges up to 10 years.

Doctor Warns House On Diseased Athletes

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Athletes coming to Canada for the olympic games next year could unwittingly be the carrier of rare infectious diseases which might become epidemic in this country, a doctor warned the commons Wednesday.

Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde assured the house that the government has quarantine contingency plan in operation. It could be activated in the event of the development or outbreak of any highly contagious disease.

Dr. P. B. Rynard (PC-Simcoe North) raised the question in the commons. He said there has been a rapid increase in the incidence of tropical diseases. He claimed Canada's facilities are inadequate for treating the increasing number of cases.

With athletes coming from all over the world the risk of an epidemic getting a start would be increased, he suggested.

"For example in such countries as Ghana, Nigeria and West Africa the disease lassa is endemic and airborne. It is possibly one of the most dangerous in the world with the frightening mortality rate of something like 18 per cent to 50 per cent.

"It could become epidemic in Canada. As far as is known no specific treatment is available. I would ask the health minister what provisions his department has made to meet the situation by setting up quarantine stations and treatment centres manned by physicians who know something about the care and treatment of this disease," said Dr. Rynard.

Lalonde said he intends to introduce further amendments to the Quarantine act during the course of the next session.

They will permit him to name any highly contagious disease as requiring quarantine.

There was also the contingency plan to be activated in the event of the outbreak of any highly contagious disease.

Thirdly there is a federal-provincial study group known as the Isolation Facilities Working Group. It is studying at the present time all the existing facilities and evaluating whether these facilities are adequate to meet the needs in case of a contagious disease being imported into Canada, said the minister.

Finally Canada is in close consultation with other countries in particular the United States and the United Kingdom, with regard to all areas of contagious diseases, said Lalonde.

PAY UNFAIR TO GRANNIES —KNOWLES

OTTAWA (FP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde promised Wednesday to look into a claim by a New Democrat MP that the family allowance scheme is unfair to some grandmothers.

Stanley Knowles, Winnipeg North Centre, said in the Commons that grandparents receiving old age security and the guaranteed income supplement and who are raising grandchildren have found that the family allowances paid for the children to the grandmother reduces her guaranteed income supplement.

3½ miles of 6′ virgin powder convinced Leanne Macdonald

Leanne Macdonald is a certified ski instructor at Whistler Mountain, British Columbia. During a photography session she used Yamaha skis on deep powder slopes which were accessible only by helicopter. At the end of the session Leanne didn't want her model fee. She wanted the skis.

Leanne has used her skis for more than three months.

"At first I had to get used to the skis. They're quicker than anything I've used before. They really turn fast. The tips stay above the powder. They're great on bumps and easy to control on ice. What I really like is that they're so quick. I've used most of the big name skis before, but these skis are something special.

All Yamahas skis have a full two-year warranty.

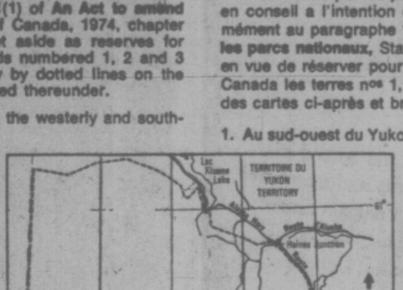
NOTICE OF INTENTION TO SET ASIDE AS RESERVES FOR NATIONAL PARKS OF CANADA, LANDS IN THE YUKON TERRITORY AND IN THE NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

Notice is hereby given that the Governor General in Council intends, pursuant to subsection 11(1) of An Act to amend the National Parks Act, Statutes of Canada, 1974, chapter 11, to issue a proclamation to set aside as reserves for National Parks of Canada the lands numbered 1, 2 and 3 hereunder as outlined respectively by dotted lines on the following maps and briefly described thereunder.

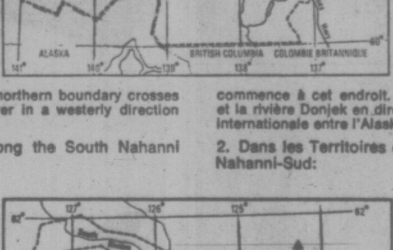
1. In the Yukon Territory adjoining the westerly and southerly boundaries of that Territory:

The area is approximately 8,500 square miles about 100 miles west along the Alaska Highway from Whitehorse and incudes the Saint Elias Mountains and the Seward Glacier. The western boundary follows the International border between Alaska and the Yukon Territory. The southern boundary follows the border between the Yukon Territory and Alaska and British Columbia. The eastern boundary generally parallels the Haines Road from the southern boundary to Haines Junction, then follows the Alaska Highway and from there to a point on the western shore of Kluane Lake. From there the northern boundary crosses the Donjek Range and the Donjek River in a westerly direction to the International border with Alaska.



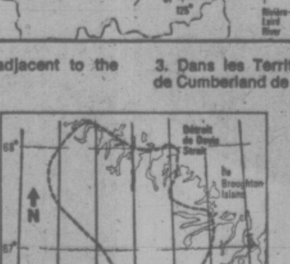
2. In the Northwest Territories along the South Nahanni River;

The area is approximately 1,800 square miles in the southwestern corner of the Northwest Territories just east of the Yukon boundary. The central spine includes a section about 170 miles in length of the South Nahanni River which flows southeast and a side branch which is a section of the Flat River. The boundaries are approximately two to eight miles from either side of each of the rivers. Nahanni Butte is about 12 miles from the southeastern boundary.



3. In the Northwest Territories; on and adjacent to the Cumberland Peninsula of Baffin Island;

The area is approximately 8,300 square miles located mainly north and west of Pangnirtung Pass, most of the area being north of the Arctic Circle and including the Penny Ice Cap. The town of Pangnirtung is the gateway of the area, the southeastern boundary being at the head of Pangnirtung Fiord. The western boundary curves south from Nudlung Fiord in the north, encircling the Penny Ice Cap and running south of Greenshield Lake east to Freya Peak then south along the west side of the Weasel River to Overlord Peak at the head of Pangnirtung Fiord. The eastern boundary runs from Overlord Peak northeasterly along the Weasel River through Mount Fleming to the north of Pangnirtung Fiord and from the Maktak Fiord across the Cumberland Peninsula to Quajon Fiord and from there follows the coast of Baffin Island facing Davis Strait, through the mouths of Narpaing Fiord, Okoa Bay and Nedlukseak Fiord to the southern shore of the Nudlung Fiord.



PLEASE NOTE: All of the above textual descriptions are general only. The complete official description of each area in English or French and a reference map may be obtained at the following offices:

AVIS D'INTENTION DE METTRE À PART, À TITRE DE RÉSERVES POUR DE FUTURS PARCS NATIONAUX, DES TERRES SITUÉES AU YUKON ET DANS LES TERRITOIRES DU NORD-OUEST

Avis est donné par les présentes que le Gouverneur général en conseil a l'intention de faire une proclamation, conformément au paragraphe 11(1) de la Loi modifiant la Loi sur les parcs nationaux, Statuts du Canada, 1974, chapitre 11, en vue de réserver pour la création de parcs nationaux du Canada les terres nos 1, 2 et 3 délimitées par les pointillés des cartes ci-après et brièvement décrites ci-dessous.

1. Au sud-ouest du Yukon:

Une zone d'environ 8 500 milles carrés, qui commence à 100 milles environ à l'ouest de Whitehorse, longe la route de l'Alaska et renferme le massif Saint-Elie et le glacier Seward. Cette zone est bornée à l'ouest par la frontière internationale entre l'Alaska et le Yukon et au sud-ouest par la limite entre le Yukon, l'Alaska et la Colombie-Britannique. De la limite méridionale à Haines Junction, la limite orientale est en général parallèle à la route de Haines, puis elle suit la route de l'Alaska et s'arrête en un point de la rive occidentale du lac Kluane. La limite septentrionale commence à cet endroit. Elle traverse la chaîne de montagnes et la rivière Donjek en direction ouest et va rejoindre la frontière internationale entre l'Alaska et le Yukon.

2. Dans les Territoires du Nord-Ouest, le long de la rivière Nahanni-Sud:

Une zone située dans l'angle sud-ouest des Territoires du Nord-Ouest, immédiatement à l'est de la limite du Yukon, et d'une superficie d'environ 1 800 milles carrés. La partie centrale comporte un tronçon, d'une longueur d'à peu près 170 milles de la rivière Nahanni-Sud, qui coule en direction sud-est ainsi que l'un de ses bras latéraux qui est, en fait, une partie de la rivière Flat. Les limtes de cette zone s'étendent de deux à huit milles environ des rives de chaque rivière. Nahanni Butte se trouve à peu près à 12 milles de la limite sud-est.

3. Dans les Territoires du Nord-Ouest, dans la péninsule de Cumberland de l'île de Baffin et dans la zone contiguë.

Zone d'environ 8 300 milles carrés, située principalement au nord et à l'ouest du col de Pangnirtung, sa plus grande partie se trouvant au nord du cercle arctique et comprenant la calotte glaciaire Penny. La ville de Pangnirtung est la voie d'accès à cette zone, la limite sud-est de cette dernière se trouvant à la partie antérieure du fiord Pangnirtung. La limite occidentale, depuis le fiord Nudlung, situé au nord, décrit un arc en direction sud, encerclant ainsi la calotte Penny et passant au sud du lac Greenshield, à l'est du pic Freya, puis longeant la rive occidentale de la rivière Weasel jusqu'au pic Overlord qui se trouve à la partie antérieure du fiord Pangnirtung. A cet endroit commence la limite orientale, qui longe la rivière Weasel en direction nord-est et traverse le mont Fleming situé au nord du fiord Pangnirtung. Du fiord Maktak, elle traverse ensuite la péninsule de Cumberland pour aboutir au fiord Quajon. De là, elle longe la côte de l'île de Baffin, en face du détroit de Davis, traverse l'entrée du fiord Narpaing, de la baie Okoa et du fiord Nedlukseak et rejoint la rive méridionale du fiord Nudlung.

A Happy Healthy Holiday Season

Turkey Tips

Now is the time to either grate or put into the blender the stale pieces of bread you have been storing in the freezer. This is one job that you can do ahead. If you have your bread crumbs ready it really simplifies making the stuffing for the bird. The general rule of thumb is that you will need 3/4 cup of bread crumbs for stuffing each pound of dressed turkey.

Did You Know

Confetti Devilled Eggs

To avoid rubbery eggs, place eggs in a pan, cover with cool water and a tight lid. When the water reaches the boiling point, reduce the heat and cook for 10 minutes. Remove from heat immediately and place under cold running water to cool quickly. Crack shells against the side of the pan so they will peel easier later.

Peel eggs, slice lengthwise in half and remove yolks. Place yolks in a bowl, add mayonnaise to moisten, salt, pepper, celery salt, and grated onion to taste. Add very finely chopped red and green pepper to taste (quantities depend upon the number of eggs used).

Mound the mixture back in the egg whites.

Marinated Brussels Sprouts and Tomato Salad

Bright red and green colours aren't the only attractions that make this salad a good choice for your holiday meals. It's best when made ahead of time—and it's also good for you!

You will need 1 1/2 lbs. of small Sprouts and 2 cups Cherry Tomatoes.

Trim the stem ends from each small sprout. Cook the sprouts covered in a small amount of boiling water for about 5 minutes 'til just tender crisp. Turn immediately into a colander and drain thoroughly.

In a small bowl combine 1 tsp. each of Prepared Mustard, Worcestershire Sauce, Sugar, Salt, 1/2 tsp. Basil, 1/4 tsp. Thyme and Pepper. Add 1/4 cup red Wine Vinegar, 1 cup Salad Oil and blend well. Cover sprouts and chill at least 4 hours.

To serve stir in 2 cups Cherry Tomatoes. Arrange Salad Greens on a serving platter or bowl. Drain the marinated sprouts and tomatoes and arrange on the salad greens.

Tips

Be considerate of your guests' well-being. Offer them fresh and dried fruits, vegetables, nuts, cheeses, and whole-grain crackers rather than candies or rich, sweet foods.

Cold Christmas weather sometimes brings with it colds and other infections. Help your family avoid these. Be sure your family eats at least 4-5 fruits and vegetables a day. Fruits and vegetables are our main sources of Vitamins A and C. These vitamins keep the outer tissues healthy and, therefore, are more capable of resisting diseases.

Christmas oranges or tangerines do not contain quite as much Vitamin C as regular oranges, but are still an excellent source of Vitamin C

Hawaiian Fruit Salad Plate

1 medium Pineapple - peeled, cored, and cut in spears
3 large Oranges - peeled and cut in slices
2 tbsp. Lemon Juice
½ cup Macadamia nuts or toasted Almonds - coarsely chopped
2 medium to large Avocados - peeled and sliced lengthwise
3 - 4 medium Bananas - peeled and cut in 1" diagonal slices
2 tbsp. Crystallized Ginger - chopped

On a large rimmed tray arrange the pineapple, oranges, avocados, and bananas in rows. Moisten bananas and avocados with lemon or lime juice to preserve colour. Sprinkle chopped ginger on the bananas. If preparing ahead, cover with a clear plastic film and chill up to 5 hours. Just before serving, sprinkle the chopped nuts on the pineapple. Garnish with lime slices, watercress, and maraschino cherries. Serve with Lime Curry Dressing. Makes about 8 - 10 servings.

Lime Curry Dressing

Blend 1/3 cup Fresh Lime (or Lemon) Juice, 1/2 cup salad Oil, 2 tbsp. Rum, 1 tbsp. Sugar, 1/2 tsp. Curry Powder, 1 tbsp. finely chopped Crystallized Ginger Do not refrigerate. Mix before serving and serve separately.

Holiday Punch

2 cups Cranberry Juice
1 cup Orange Juice 4 cups Lemonade
Maraschino Cherries Lime Slices
2 cups mild flavoured carbonated beverage (Ginger Ale or Lemon Lime)

Mix all ingredients (except the carbonated beverage) together in a large bowl. Chill. Add the bubbly just before serving. Add ice cubes, if desired. Yield: 18 punch cup servings.

Tips

Cut grapefruit or oranges in half, remove the pulp and dry the shells. (Eat the fruit separately.) Use the dried shells as small serving dishes for fruit salad, ice cream, or for extra small bowls for pickles or nuts.
The citrus baskets may be candied.

Tiny Tips

Use juice from canned fruit to sweeten and flavour your fruit punch.

Serve smaller portions. Help your pocket book and your guests' figures at the same time!

When choosing crackers, for added nourishment, choose whole grain crackers or those with seeds.

Serve fruit juices, fruit punch or egg nog to your young visitors rather than pop.

Make your Christmas drinks more nourishing by using Egg Nog or fruit juices as a mixer.

Tips

When storing cookies out of sight until the guests arrive, be sure to store the same kinds of cookies together. If you mix drop cookies with crisp cookies you will find that they will absorb moisture or lose it from being in contact with each other. There's nothing worse than a soggy cookie!

To create a festive air, add chopped green pepper and red pepper or pimento to tuna, chicken or turkey casseroles and salads.

Serve bright, crunchy red apples with green grapes and a choice of cheese for a colorful dessert that is light in calories and heavy on good nourishment!

Cranberry Sauce

4 cups Cranberries
1 1/2 cups Sugar
1 3/4 cups Water

Boil sugar and water for 5 minutes. Add cranberries and boil without stirring until skins pop—approximately 5 minutes. Cool in covered saucepan. Yield: approximately 1 quart.

Appetizers

Want to start your next party off with a crunch! Serve a tray of colourful, crisp vegetables around a bowl of tangy dip! It's a conversation piece that starts both the conversation and the digestive juices flowing! The vegetables may be prepared in advance and stored in plastic bags in the refrigerator 'til just before your guests arrive. All you have to do is arrange them around your dip. Here are a few suggestions for 'dippers' . . . Raw Broccoli Spears, Green Pepper Sticks, Celery Sticks, Carrot Sticks, Cherry Tomatoes, Raw Mushrooms, Cucumber Sticks, Cauliflowerettes, Radish Roses, Zucchini Slices and Parsley.

You may use one of our Lucerne dips, or prepare your own with a base of Sour Cream, or Yogurt, plus your favourite seasonings.

Christmas Shaped Cheeses

Cheeses of your choice can be mixed with sour cream, mayonnaise, or cream and seasonings to consistency to mould into different shapes. For individual servings roll into small carrot shapes and place a sprig of parsley in end, or roll into larger balls and then in finely chopped nuts. You can also shape the cheese mould into a rounded cone shape, then stud with toasted almond halves to make it look like a pine cone.

Insurance Crime Up

TORONTO (CP) — The president of Insurance Crime Prevention Bureau said Wednesday that insurance-related crime costs about $100 million a year, of which auto and commercial vehicle theft are a significant factor.

J. M. McFadyen said in an interview that insurance-related crime "is growing at a frightening pace," and most total losses are in fire, theft and property insurance coverages.

"Some insurance companies feel they have more to fear from arson in the years ahead than changing technology," he said.

His company is a Canadian association of property and casualty insurers. Its statistics say that insurance losses from automobile thefts are expected to reach a record $40 million this year compared with $34.5 million in 1974.

The recovery rate of stolen cars decreased to 85.7 per cent in 1974 from 90 per cent in 1970, its figures show. The loss in car thefts in Ontario was about $9 million, in Quebec about $16 million and in British Columbia about $5 million.

McFadyen said that the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs has estimated losses from white-collar crime in Canada at about $4 billion annually.

These are crimes of embezzlement, employee theft, stock frauds, shoplifting, service and product contracting fraud and inventory shrinkage, he said.

Ethnic Aid Shifts

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Munro, federal minister of state for multiculturalism, indicated Wednesday that the federal government's multiculturalism policy is undergoing its first shift in direction since it was instituted in 1971.

Munro, who also is federal labor minister, told a news conference that he wants to cut back government support for folklore activities, such as dance troupes, of individual ethnic groups.

Instead, he said, a greater proportion of the department's budget should go to activities which give ethnic groups wider exposure to one another and to society as a whole.

Munro said the perception of many Canadians of ethnic groups is "all custumes — that engenders a degree of patronization that should be combatted."

He noted that in some cases cultural grants have gone to small groups within an ethnic community, resulting in some elitism.

Munro also said that agencies such as the CBC, the National Film Board and the Canadian Radio-Television Commission have been approached to provide funding for multicultural programming.

Initial response has been under serious consideration, Munro said, and a new policy "in general sense favorable," he said.

A departmental committee currently is meeting with ethnic press association officials to find a way to help finance struggling ethnic newspapers without compromising their independence, Munro added.

While not yet government policy, the new moves are under serious consideration, Munro said, and a new policy paper — the first major review of multiculturlaism since 1971 — will go to cabinet by the end of this year or in early January.

He also told the news conference, called mainly for ethnic media, that the department's $8 million budget will not decrease during the government's austerity program, and the money from other agencies may increase it.

Defences Crumble In Timor

JAKARTA (Reuter) — Sources say pro-Indonesian forces pushed eastward into Portuguese Timor today after capturing the strategic town of Baucau from leftist Fretilin troops.

Baucau, 50 miles east of the capital of Dili, has an international airport which previously had been used to receive medical aid from Darwin, Australia.

The sources said the main Fretilin strength in Baucau had been destroyed, but fighting still was going on to the east of the town. The airport had been damaged badly, they added.

The fall of Baucau, the second largest town in the Portuguese colony north of Australia, means pro-Indonesian forces have cut off the main Fretilin supply point and tightened their grip on the eastern part of the territory.

Due to the bad state of roads in the present rainy season, the pro-Indonesian forces are believed to have attacked Baucau with the help of Indonesian marines and paratroopers, as in the case of the fall of Dili Sunday.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Adam Malik, however, continued to insist to newsmen here that Indonesian "volunteers" rather than regular troops were being used in Portuguese Timor.

BACK-TO-WORK OR LOSE JOBS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Striking pressmen at the Washington Post have until midnight Sunday to return to work — individually or collectively — or they will be replaced by non-union employees, according to Post executives..

But the union says it will ignore the ultimatum and take its fight to the people. Post vice-president Mark Meagher said, however, that he was not trying to "bust" the union.

Alberta Controls Rents

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government introduced rent control legislation Wednesaday, limiting landlords to rent increases totalling 19 per cent between next January 1 and June 30, 1977.

Landlords will be allowed to increase rents by 10 per cent after Jan. 1 and by a further nine percent after Dec. 31, 1976.

Increases above those levels will have to be justified before a rent regulation officer whose decison can be appealed to a rent regulation board.

New construction is exempt from the legislaiton, said Graham Harle, consumer and corporate affairs minister, in order to encourage construction of more rental accommodation to condiminiums on conversion of rental accommodatio to condominiums was declared.

Harle told reporters that Alberta law requires 90 days' notice of rent increases, so increases announced to tenants from about last Oct. 1 will be controlled by the bill.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Service station holdup man Gordon Wendal Karsgaard, 22, no fixed address, was sentenced to 2½ years in the penitentiary Wednesday "for his own sake and the public safety."

Judge William Ostler in imposing sentence referred to a period of mental instability suffered by the accused and the need of ensuring treatment for him during the longer period of imprisonment.

Two physicians testified as to Karsgaard's fitness to instruct counsel and be tried, but one of them recommended extensive treatment.

Karsgaard pleaded guilty to the pellet gun stickup of a service station at Town and Country shopping centre, later changed his plea and then discussed with police two more changes of plea.

He had used a mask in the robbery which netted $443 in cash and cheques Sept. 4. Police said he came to them and admitted the holdup and said he had burned about $300 in cheques.

While in custody Karsgaard was assaulted and someone set fire to his cell, requiring him to be put in protective care.

In addition to the need in this case for testing and treatment, Ostler noted: "There has been an alarming increase of robbery in this community in past months and it is essential, of course, that sentences imposed for this offence be such that they act as a deterrent."

* * *

Judge D. K. McAdam issued a warrant for the arrest of Robert Carnell Morton, 26, of Seattle, who failed to appear for trial on an assault charge after posting $250 cash bond.

He was released on his own undertaking in the sum of $1,500, but was taken into custody until an immigration hearing provided for his deportation, only to return for the trial.

He will likely lose the $250 cash and if he crosses the Canadian border again proceedings to get $1,500 from him may be undertaken.

Morton was charged with assault causing bodily harm Nov. 27 outside the Colony beer parlor, where Robert Durie, 27, of 558 Broadway, was struck with an axe which cut his face and broke his nose.

* * *

Seventeen-year-old Norman Wayne Hogan, 880 Lampson, was placed on two years probation when sentence was suspended on a charge of assault causing bodily harm to a woman at his home Nov. 12.

Hogan pleaded guilty to the charge Nov. 26. The court ordered a program of weekend work camp attendance.

* * *

Driving while prohibited cost Charles William Karaim, 24, of 748 Audley, a four-month jail sentence imposed by Judge F. S. Green, who also further banned the accused from driving for a year.

Karaim pleaded guilty to the charge in Victoria Saturday.

* * *

Judge McAdam said the offence merited jail, but he put Terry Hildebrandt, 20, on probation for 12 months and fined him $250 instead.

The accused pleaded guilty to being in possession of stolen goods.

He was charged after police stopped a car in which he was riding on Dallas near Cook that was found to be the property of Sharon Thompson, 360 Douglas, which police said was stolen. A charge of theft was withdrawn.

Hildebrandt, 20, was living at 724 Yates and said his wife is expecting a baby. He said he was unemployed but expected to begin a construction job Monday.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang read to the court a record of convictions including possession of stolen property, auto theft and possession of a weapon.

* * *

Paul Nicholson, 36, of 1736 Newton, was fined $150 and $100 respectively on pleading guilty to two charges of assault arising from a disturbance in Halfway House Oct. 11.

Court was told Nicholson seized Christopher Bitton, 1032 McGregor by the throat, and punched David Mathers, 1021 Gillespie, in the face during a scuffle in the beer parlor.

"I drank too much, I guess," the accused said.

* * *

A 17-year-old away from his Ottawa home for the first time was fined a total of $100 after pleading guilty to charges of theft and possession of stolen property.

Police said Thomas William Sample, of 1612 Richmond, took a pair of boots from Woolworth's store Dec. 6 and when apprehended in the next block was found also to have a wallet and two sweaters from Eaton's, totalling $78.99 value.

He also had $45 cash, court was told.

Sample said he had worked here in a service station for three weeks an saved money to fly back to Ottawa.

"I didn't really need them," he said "I had a pair of boots."

"Did you need the wallet and two sweaters?" McAdam asked.

"No, sir."

GM Chief Optimistic Over '76 Sales

DETROIT (UPI) — In the most optimistic prediction yet of the auto industry's recovery from the deepest slump since the great depression, General Motors chairman Thomas Murphy today predicted sales would top 10¼ million cars in 1976.

The 20 per cent improvement that Murphy is predicting over this year's recession level would put 1976 in the record books as the third best ever.

In a year-end outlook, the chief executive of the world's largest auto company said two things clouding his outlook are the uncertainties caused by upcoming labor negotiations and the still unresolved conflict with Congress over clean air standards.

Murphy said he expected "sensible solutions" to both problems.

"We are confident that in the government and in the unions there is a high appreciation of the importance of the American automobile industry and a firm determination to maintain its recovery," he said.

The GM chairman renewed his challenge to the United Auto Workers not to seek too much in the way of more time off the job.

New contracts must achieve "a realistic balance between productivity and compensation" or the present recovery and the nation's ability to compete in world markets may be impaired, he said.

Murphy's optimism was in sharp contrast to the predictions of his main competitor, Henry Ford II of the Ford Motor Co., who says auto sales, including imports, won't get much above 9.5 million in 1976.

This year's estimated 8.6 million sales will be about 7 per cent below 1974 and nearly 25 per cent below the record 1973 level before the start of the Arab oil embargo that triggered the two-year slump.

United Grounds Planes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With strike negotiations broken off indefinitely, United Airlines has cancelled all 1,400 daily scheduled flights until Christmas Eve.

The airline also has cancelled all charter flights until Jan. 1 negotiations with striking machinists were recessed Wednesday by federal mediators.

United has already laid off 13,000 other workers, including all of its pilots and flight attendants and a spokesman said Wednesday the airline would reduce work hours and pay by 50 per cent for the remaining 12,500 non-union, non-management employees, effective Saturday.

United's 6,800 management employees also will take a 50 per cent pay cut while continuing to work full shifts.

The bargaining — involving food and ramp service workers, flight dispatchers and mechanics — is said to be centred on pay, pensions and part-time workers.

U.S. SUSPECT NABBED IN TORONTO SLAYING

DENVER (UPI) — A suspect in the September slaying of a Royal York Hotel employee in Toronto shot and killed a police officer outside a crowded bust station Wednesday night. Police wounded and captured the man.

Ray Embry, of Louisville, Ky., told officers guarding him in hospital that he had left a bomb in the downtown Continental Trailways station. Officers searched, but found no explosives.

Embry is also a suspect in the wounding of a Toronto police officer and a Canadian Pacific detective in the Toronto incident.

All-American Route Seen Better 'Risk'

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — An all-American natural gas pipeline through Alaska is rated a better "risk" than a Mackenzie Valley project through Canada in an an analysis released here Wednesday by the U.S. interior department

However, despite being accused by a reporter of favoring the Alaska route, an interior department spokesman insisted that "we do not have a positon" on the merits of the two routes.

The risk analysis was attached to a 242-page feasibility study of the two pipeline systems which was delivered to the U.S. Congress.

In a letter accompanying the study, Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe said either route is feasible economically and technically, but both are subject to environmental considerations not yet completed. Kleppe himself expressed no preference.

The lack of a recommendation in the study was stressed by Jack Carlson, assistant secretary of the department, at a briefing for reporters and at a second session with members of Congress.

"People will have to be left to their own judgment," Carlson said.

However, following his presentation of highlights and comments on the over-all study, Carlson was asked if what he said amounted, in fact, to an expression of preference for the trans-Alaska route.

"That's a possible interpretaton," he replied.

"We would not advocate that, however," he added.

A decision on a route would include other factors besides the risk analysis, he said — "environment relations with Canada and others."

Carlson suggested the decision could be based on "the difference between perception and actuality."

He predicted that there "will be a regional debate" in the Congress, pitting the West Coast against the Midwest.

The implication of this is that West Coast interests may favor the Alaska pipeline project promoted by the El Paso Company, which would liquefy gas from Prudhoe Bay and ship it by tanker to California for redistribution across the states, while mid-eastern interests would favor the Mackenzie Valley route, carrying both Alaskan and Canadian gas for distribution in both countries from the Midwest.

Sunshine Means Death for These Tots

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Two young sisters are condemned to a life without sunshine because the sun's rays mean certain death for them.

Terri Addington, 12, and her sister, Lisa, 10, cannot let sunlight touch them because their bodies are unable to cope with the sun's ultraviolet rays.

"Ultraviolet is harmful to all of us," said Dr. Pete Dosser, a dermatologist and one of several doctors following the girls' case. "But the normal body quickly and easily repairs the damage. The girls' repair mechanisms are faulty."

This results in severe freckling which the girls have suffered since their first year. The freckles later turn into rough, scaly spots which in turn may develop into one of several forms of skin cancer.

Dosser said skin cancer is 100-per-cent curable. But victims of the disease, called xeroderma pigmentosa, have so many tumors that just one over-looked lesion can become fatal quickly if it spreads to the blood stream or brain.

There is no known cure for the disease and life expectancy based on the 50 or so previously recorded cases runs from eight to 15 years.

"About the only form of treatment we know of is absolute avoidance of sunlight and frequent operations to remove the skin tumors as they crop up," Dosser said.

Dosser estimates Terri has had about 200 to 300 skin tumors removed, mostly from her face, neck and arms, during the last seven years.

She has had two major operations for removal of large growths—one the size of a fist— in the last two months and is scheduled for surgery again Friday.

Lisa also has had several lesions removed, but her case is not as advanced as Terri's was at the same age.

Their parents, Billie Ritchie and Edward Addington, are both carriers of the disease but show none of its symptoms.

"Neither one of us had the foggiest idea we were carriers, let alone that the disease even existed," Mrs. Ritchie said. "The chance of our meeting and having two sick children is one in millions."

Cyclamate 'Not Dangerous'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The once-popular artifical sweetener cyclamate may not cause cancer after all, according to the preliminary findings of a government-sponsored panel of university professors.

Three of five committee members concluded Wednesday there is no evidence to show the sugar substitute is capable of causing cancer, as was suspected when cyclamates were taken off the market in 1969.

Two other scientists hedged a little and said there was a possibility cyclamates might be a very weak cancer causer.

But committee chairman Arnold Brown said: "We are confident that this is not a strong carcinogen (cancer-causer) like tobacco smoking."

The panel, created by the National Cancer Institute at the request of the Food and Drug Administration, emphasized its findings were preliminary.

But Brown, professor of pathology at Mayo Medical School, Rochester, Minn., said the final report expected Jan. 13 will represent Wednesday's conclusions.

"I think in general all of us are convinced that cyclamate can't be incriminated as a strong carcinogen," Brown said in an interview after the panel concluded a five-hour meeting at the National Institute of Health.

"No way. But we still have a little reservation in the back of our minds that it might be a very weak one."

The Calorie Control Council, which represents manufacturers of artifically sweetened foods, said it was gratified by the decision.

Millions of pounds of cyclamates were being consumed annually by calorie-conscious North Americans when the sugar substitute was banned because one study found bladder cancers in rats that had been fed a cyclamate-saccharin mixture.

The panel, which first met last July, reviewed data from that test along with the results of 19 other cyclamate studies conducted on laboratory animals around the world. Of the 17 studies worth considering, 12 were negative, two were negative but questionable and three showed positive results, but also were questionable.

Brown said none of the tests was sensitive enough to completely rule out the possibility that cyclamates might be able to cause cancer in humans at very low rates.

He said it was virtually impossible to prove the substance completely safe.

"Now where does that leave the FDA?" Brown asked, referring to the agency's job of determining whether cyclamates should be permitted back on the market.

"Well, they're going to have to grapple with how much weight they are going to give to this (testing) insensitivity problem. It's a tough one."

Bacon-Cancer Links Easing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. government inspectors have found that the concentration of a preservative believed to pose a cancer threat is declining in bacon.

"Our intention certainly is to get rid of it altogether," Dr. Harry Mussman, associate director of the animal Plant Health Inspection Service of the Department of Agriculture, said Wednesday.

Processors realize they do not have to use as much sodium nitrite and sodium nitrate as they had been using to make bacon that will not spoil, Mussman said.

The two agents are used as preservatives but scientists fear that they form nitrosamines, a suspected cancer-causing agent.

The government has given the meat processing industry a year to find a way to make products free of nitrosamines.

Mussman said Wednesday Food and Drug Administration experts recently reported finding fewer parts of nitrosamines in bacon sold at retail levels.

Mussman also said the department is investigating country ham to see if the curing agents can be reduced in that product.

He said a food and drug administration expert told the meeting that a recent sample of 20 to 21 bacons being sold at the retail level showed nitrosamines ranging from five to 47 parts per billion — with more than half of them less than 10 ppb.

He said that reflects a "continuing decrease" in nitrosamines.

COCAINE CHARGE

BARRANQUILLA, Colombia (AP) — Kelly Anne Martin, daughter of manager Billy Martin of baseball's New York Yankees, has been arrested and charged with carrying 450 grams of cocaine, the administrative department of security reported Wednesday. An ADS spokesman said Miss Martin, 22, was detained Nov. 16 at the local airport as she prepared to fly to Miami. They said she was carrying the cocaine, worth an estimated $60,000, hidden on her person.

Take Complaints Elsewhere, VSE Chief

VANCOUVER (CP) — Cyril White, president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange, said Wednesday that shareholders of Consolidated Mt. Hyland Mines Ltd. who picketed the VSE Tuesday should take their grievances to the Corporate and Financial Services Commission.

The 10 pickets were protesting the suspension of trading in their stock after it had risen from $1.50 to $3.80.

White said there was no way the VSE could change its position on the suspension because it would appear as though it was "bending to intimidation."

He said he thought the picketing would delay a resumption in trading in the stock, but said "I am satisfied that there will be some agreement eventually."

The commission to which White was referring is an appeal body within corporate and financial services, a division of the attorney-general's department.

The suspension came about after the company proposed an issue of 1.8 million shares, but the VSE, calling the deal "too rich," suggested 700,000-share issue.

Worley Son Jail Suicide

QUESNEL (CP) — A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday that the death of Andrew Worley, 22, of Quesnel was a suicide.

The man's body was founding hanging in an RCMP jail cell in the morning Nov. 21 after Worley had been arrested as a suspect following a holdup the previous night.

Worley was the son of Ron Worley, a former British Columbia deputy travel minister under the Social Credit government of W. A. C. Bennett.

The jury ruled that Worley's death was unnatural and the result of asphpxiation by strangulation. No blame was attached.

The jury recommended that improved supervision be implemented for the cell which was occupied by Worley because the cell is not clearly visible from the entrance to the cell block.

Howard Anderson, the guard on duty that night, testified that he does not go beyond a steel door blocking off the cell Worley was in because opening of the door would wake the prisoners.

It was also recommended that a different type of mattress cover should be considered.

Dr. Lyon Appleby, who performed the initial examination of Worlep's body, told the inquest that the zipper from the mattress in the cell was wrapped tightly around Worley's throat and that seemed to have caused death.

Woman, 63, Cited In Welfare Bilk

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 63-year-old woman who earned $18,000 in six years of working as a waitress has been charged with collecting $14,000 in combined welfare and Unemployment Insurance Benefits. Mildred Halldorson will appear in provincial court Jan. 8 on a charge of fraud.

Slide Shifts Trains

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canadian National Railways spokesman says an average of five freight trains a day have been moving in each direction on the CP rail line since the CNR mainline was blocked a week ago in the Fraser Canyon.

C. E. Armstrong, vice-president CNR mountain region, said that other CNR freight trains have been moving over British Columbia rail lines via Prince George in central B.C.

The CNR mainline was blocked by a series of rock and mud slides a week ago about 19 miles west of Boston Bar. Engineering forces were working to stabilize the slope at the slide location.

Chinese Carp Weed Answer?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A breed of Chinese carp with a voracious appetite for vegetation is the obvious answer to the weed problem in Lake Okanagan, a city consulting agriculturist said Wednesday.

Stan Weston said in an interview that the Chinese carp have been a success in England since 1968, when 2,000 of them were imported to clean out weeds and grasses from lakes, rivers and waterways.

Weston said there is no danger of the fish becoming a problem because it does not reproduce outside of its Asian or Eastern Russian habitat.

He said experiements with Chinese carp in the Philippines have been successful and the fish are big business there.

Chinese carp will not eat other fish in the lake, but will nibble at worms or dough balls and could be caught by fishermen, he said.

Weston said the $300,000 allocated by the Okanagan Basin Water Board to clear 600 weed-infested acres is a waste of money, adding that enough carp to do the job could be purchased for $20,000 or $30,000.

He said he introduced this idea of weed control to a federal fisheries biologists and was told there is a law against introducing new species of fish.

Bank of B.C. Ups Capital to $2.5M

VANCOUVER (CP) — Despite the objection of several shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia, approval was given at the bank's annual meeting to increase its authorized capital from $1 million to $2.5 million.

Chairman Albert Hall said the bank has no immediate plans to issue stock, but asked shareholders for approval to do so if the directors find it necessary.

Hall said if authorization was not given and a stock issue was required during the year, delays of three months for approval could result, and the timing of the share issue could be thrown off.

One of the shareholders attending the meeting questioned issuing further shares when the market value of the bank's shares has decreased to about $18 from their original purchase price of $25.

MD TAX CHEAT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Henry Pauls, a Chilliwack physician, pleaded guilty in provincial court Wednesday to three counts of evading income tax between Dec. 31, 1970, and Dec. 31, 1972. He admitted he claimed $60,408 in false expenses. Dr. Pauls will be sentenced Dec. 18.

Sky Shop Results In 2 Weeks

OTTAWA (FP) — Revenue Minister Bud Cullen indicated yesterday that information on the RCMP investigation into the skp shops affair would be made public in two weeks.

He stated in the Commons that the investigation, which involves former Liberal fund raiser Senator Louis Giguere, is still under investigation.

COLD SOUPS CAUGHT ON

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

NEW YORK — Numerous changes in the eating and drinking habits of Americans occurred shortly after the Second World War, notably cocktails on the rocks and cold savory soups.

When the late chef Louis Diat created vichyssoise, it was in a sense revolutionary. Since that period, cold soups have become very much a popular staple for summer. Here are two, to serve cold or hot. And cold garlic soup isn't as far out as it may seem. They've been serving garlic soup in France for generations.

2 tablespoons butter
2 cups chopped onion
2 cups peeled, seeded, cubed cucumbers
3 cups tomatoes, peeled, cored and cubed
3 basil leaves or one teaspoon dried
2 cups chicken broth
2 cups yogurt
Salt
1 teaspoon chopped fresh mint, optional

1. Melt the butter in a saucepan and add the onion. Cook, stirring frequently, about 10 minutes. Do not brown.

2. Add the cucumber, tomaoes, basil and chicken broth. Cook, stirring frequently, about 30 minutes.

3. Put the mixture, including the vegetable solids, through a sieve, or blend in an electric blender.

4. Empty the mixture into a bowl and add the yogurt and salt to taste. Chill thoroughly. Add the mint and serve.

Yield: About six servings.

COLD GARLIC SOUP

1 quart rich chicken broth
2 large cloves garlic
2 cups heavy cream
4 egg yolks
Salt and freshly ground pepper
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg or to taste
1½ cups garlic croutons (see recipe).

1. Pour the broth into a two-quart heavy casserole.

2. Peel the garlic and crush each clove slightly. Add it to the broth. Simmer 10 minutes.

3. Blend the cream and yolks and add the mixture to the broth, stirring rapidly. Bring just to the boil, stirring constantly, and remove from the heat. Add salt and pepper to taste and the nutmeg. Serve very cold with a garnish of croutons on each serving. (Can also be served piping hot.)

Yield: Six to eight servings.

GARLIC CROUTONS

2 cloves garlic
4 tablespoons butter
1½ cups bread cut into half-inch cubes

1. Peel the garlic and crush each clove slightly.

2. Heat the butter in a heavy saucepan, and when it is hot, add the garlic and bread cubes. Cook, stirring and shaking the skillet, until the cubes are golden brown all over. Drain the cubes and discard the garlic.

Yield: One and one-half cups.

Windblown Cake

1½ cups sifted cake-and-pastry flour
1 tsp. baking powder
3 eggs, yolks and whites separated
¾ cup water
1¼ cup granulated sugar
1¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla

Sift together the sifted flour, baking powder and salt. Separate the eggs and put yolks in a large bowl. Put whites in a medium bowl. To the yolks add the ¾ cup water and beat until they increase in volume to as much as a quart.

Fold in sugar gradually and continue beating for another 2 minutes. Remove beaters. Fold in sifted flour and baking powder and salt. Beat whites until stiff but not dry and fold in.

Bake in buttered 10'' tube pan at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 40 to 45 minutes. While cake is still hot pour over this Glaze: Heat together ¼ cup butter, 2-3 cup granulated sugar, 1-3 cup orange juice and ½ cup chopped almonds (optional) until sugar dissolves. Pour over hot cake. Let cool in pan before cutting.

NOTE: Windblown cake may be made without the glaze. Allow to cool in inverted pan.

Two from Canada—and Both Victorians

elizabeth forbes

At independence ceremonies (November 21 to 27) for Dutch Guyana — now Surinam — there were two Canadians listed as official guests.

And, believe it or not, both claimed Victoria as home base.

One was Mrs. Gordon (Kay) Armstrong, who moved here with her husband from Toronto, in 1973, after he retired from military service.

The other was Ormond W. Dier.

Mrs. Armstrong, head of Canada's National Council of Women, received her official invitation through the Surinam government, at the request of the Council of Women in that country, with whom Canada' council is twinned.

Dier, on the other hand, was presenting his credentials as Canada's first Ambassador to Surinam, following an assignment as trade commissioner in British Guyana.

"You can imagine my surprise," Mrs. Armstrong says, "when he told me he calls this city his home town."

Paramaribo, capital city of Surinam, was centre of all the independence ceremonies.

And during the time she was there the government not only assigned a car for Kay Armstrong's use, but also a young man as driver and a young woman as her aide-de-camp, "both top students in their respective schools."

Official guests stayed together in the Hotel Torarica. They were given printed and numbered cards to carry and to show whenever requested.

Holland's Princess Beatrice represented the Netherlands and during Independence Week officially opened a new hospital for handicapped children in Paramaribo.

Money for this modern one-storey building, close to the general hospital, was a part of Princess Beatrice's wedding gift from Dutch Guyana, which she returned for that specific purpose.

The week's official program was designed in such a way that everyone "including Creoles, Indians, bush negroes, Jamaicans, Dutch, Hindustani, Javanese, Chinese and Europeans," could take part in the ceremonies.

On Independence Eve there was a state banquet and ball at the palace of Governor and Madame Terrier-Vas, followed by a fireworks dispaly in the spacious grounds where thousands of grown-ups and children gathered.

Then, promptly at midnight, the old flag came down and the new one — red, white and green horizontal stripes centred by a gold star — went up.

Mrs. Armstrong with Surinam handicraft.

First sitting of the new Surinam Parliament, headed by Minister-President Henk A. E. Arron, took place on Independence Day, in a small white Dutch "kerk" built two hundred years ago.

Official guests sat in the galleries to listen as the 39-member coalition government "with only one woman" inaugurated the new regime.

"There was a definite religious overtone to the sitting," says Mrs. Armstrong, "In which every members of that government seemed conscious of the coming together, in this new independent state, of many ethnic groups and many faiths."

Other outstanding events included a water regatta hosted by the Surinam government; a youth culture program in one of the parks, with a youth orchestra concert; an acrobatic flying display and a 21-gun salute on Independence Day from three warships, in there to represent The Netherlands, Brazil and Venezuela.

Any spare time she had "and that was usually during the siesta from 2 to 5 in the afternoon," this official Canadian guest "went exploring" with her car, her driver and her aide-de-camp.

She saw the "one and only" dam in the country with its man-made lake named Afoboka, a word that in the native tongue, for some strange reason, means "break your mother's bones."

Yet, each hut "no matter how poorly furnished" had its tea kettle and its radio.

There was a trade fair too, in Paramaribo, at which various women's organizations (including the Council of Women and an active Soroptimist Club) had booths set up to show their handicrafts and also to publicize various projects such as day care programs and visual aids for schools.

"Women of all ethnic groups are members of these organizations," Mrs. Armstrong reports.

"Color of skin doesn't matter down there . . . rather, the though seems to be of people and what they can contribute."

Surninam, this keen-minded Canadian discovered, is about the size of Ontario "and much the same shape."

It has a population of 375 thousand (150 thousand in Parimaribo alone) the greatest percentage being Creoles and Hindustani and the smallest Chinese and Europeans.

Half of that population "is under 30 in age," she says. "So, if properly challenged, youth could provide a basis for a truly meaningful nation."

The country has "everything going for it," she believes, "and everything to do things with."

There is plenty of arable land and plenty of water.

Fruits grow everywhere . . . including guava, pomgranites, papayas. Vegetables and greens, too.

"If the people — and the government — only recognize this and direct their energies into the proper channels . . . there is enough for everyone."

HOW TO FIX A WHITE ELEPHANT

It sounds like it should be big and white and wild. But strangely, a White Elephant is short and white and smooth. So smooth, and so delicious, in fact, that you'll hardly know that it has 2 oz. of liquor in it. Like all elephants, a White Elephant should always be treated with respect.

Here's all you do to mix a White Elephant: pour 1 oz. Smirnoff, 1 oz. white creme de cacao and 1 oz. milk into a short glass with ice. Stir. And enjoy the little alabaster behemoth.

Vitamins Unlinked To Greying Hair

QUESTION:
Is there a vitamin which prevents grey hair?

ANSWER:
No known remedy has been discovered to date that will prevent the greying of hair. When it was found that pantothenic acid, a B vitamin would prevent grey hair in certain strains of laboratory animals on deficient diets, there was great hope that it would work similarly in humans. Unfortunately, it did not. There is yet no evidence that nutrition plays any role in the greying of hair.

QUESTION:
If a family likes pizza, is it all right to give it to them fairly often?

ANSWER:
Pizza prepared with lots of meat or sausage, cheese and tomatoes has good food value. Pizza is usually a good source of protein and calcium and also contributes its share of iron, vitamins A and C, and the B complex vitamins to the daily diet. Pizza makes a fine teen snack or party treat and adds variety to family meals.

QUESTION:
Are leeks ever used in other combinations besides in soups?

ANSWER:
In addition to flavouring soups, try adding shredded or chopped leeks to mixed vegetables. Leeks can also be served alone as a vegetable accompanying meat dishes. Prepare them similarly to asparagus — boiled in salt water and served hot or cold with melted butter or sauces, such as cream sauce or holandaise sauce. Mayonnaise makes a good accompaniment for cold leeks. Another tasty vegetable dish is leek au gratin — sprinkle boiled or sauteed leeks with a combination of grated cheeses and brown for a moment in the oven. The white part of the leek can be sliced thinly, divided into rings, and used to replace green onions in a tossed salad.

"If you'd like to replace some of the costly white or brown sugar in your cooking and baking, try less expensive corn syryp. However, don't replace more than half the sugar with syrup. Also, for each cup of corn syrup you use instead of sugar, reduce the liquid by ¼ cup.

These are just some of the suggestions offered in the 20-page booklet "Cooking With Beehive" (Le cuisson au sirop Beehive"). In addition, the booklet features a multitude of recipes for tasty meat and poultry dishes, vegetables, cakes, quick breads, desserts, dessert sauces, plus and pastry.

The next item you expect guests, you may want to surprise them with marinated chicken. It's easy to prepare and a pleasant change from the usual chicken dishes.

Another out-of-the-ordinary idea is glazed vegetables. They should first be partly cooked and after seasoning baked in the oven until tender.

A healthy year-round dessert is golden orange jelly mold. Besides orange juice and orange sections, it contains a banana.

You may also want to try the yummy sherried raisin pie or apple n' cheese pie, with the cheese baked right into the filling.

Another pie with a difference is peach caramel pie. You're bound to receive compliments for this one!

However You Shape It, Bread Is Nutritious

No matter what shape it comes in bread is a nutritious food. Enriched bread, rolls, hamburger or hot dog buns supply the three important B vitamins (niacin, thiamine, riboflavin) as well as calcium and iron. And bread, as you know, is one of the daily food requirements recommended in Canada's Food Guide.

For guests who prefer to take their sports indoors particularly in cooler weather ... bridge, cribbage, table tennis, watching a game on T.V. ... fresh buns from your grocery store can be a blessing for the hostess.

Here's a new twist to a hamburger filling ... Peanut Butter Beef Rolls. As an accompaniment serve crisp celery and carrot sticks, tomato wedges and cubes of cheese.

Another tasty idea is Hot Ham Buns. Easy to fix no matter how many guests you have to satisfy. Prepare in advance and when it's time for food just pop them in the oven to heat through and serve.

Peanut Butter Beef Rolls
(Serves 6)

1 pound ground beef
¼ cup peanut butter
1 teaspoon salt
⅓ cup milk
1 egg
6 hot dog rolls

Mix the first five ingredients together. Form into six rolls 5"x2". Fry until cooked through. Serve in heated hot dog rolls with mustard, relish and onion slices.

Hot Ham Buns
(Serves 4)

¼ cup soft butter or margarine
2 tablespoons prepared horseradish-mustard
2 teaspoons poppy seed
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
4 hamburger buns, split
4 thin slices ham
4 slices process Canadian cheese

Mix together first four ingredients; spread on cut surface of hamburger buns. Tuck a slice of ham and cheese in each bun. Arrange on baking sheet. Bake in 350 degree F. oven for 20 minutes or until hot.

Instead of Dinner . . . A Hospital Bed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ten years ago, Kris Viddal was en route with friends on the Trans-Canada Highway approaching Keewatin, Ont., to enjoy Christmas dinner.

Five days later Kris awoke in a hospital room "with a headache." The car in which she had been riding was involved in a head-on collision.

A blood clot in her neck starved her brain of oxygen. She could not speak and she could not move her limbs.

Today her walk is a bit slow, her speech slightly hesitant; but by any measure Miss Viddal is a remarkable woman who has made a gradual, yet astonishing recovery.

She is "re-learning the English language" at 30 years of age.

"I still haven't got used to my talking like this," she said haltingly. "The way I express myself is different. Before I had a high standard of English."

For three years she worked with physiotherapists to recover use of her limbs. Twice a day she would lie on a table and lift five-pound weights on pulleys with her legs.

She graduated from a wheelchair to a cane, then threw away the cane in favor of "my drunken walk."

Her right hand still "sleeps" and always will. She exercises it to prevent degeneration of the limb. Speech therapy took four years.

Social workers and psychologists who worked with Miss Viddal said she has a "poor level of motivation."

She says that report is not true. As part of her occupational therapy, she helped mentally retarded children.

For six months she worked with a boy who wouldn't express himself verbally or non-verbally. He finally hit a shelf with a baseball bat, the first time he expressed himself.

A 'Super' Dish Suggestion For 'Eye of the Round' Fans

By MARY MOORE

Friends of mine think that the "eye of the round" cut of beef is ideal because it is lean and because it slices so well. Today's recipe is SUPER sliced cold.

Those "eye of the round" enthusiasts will try this dish. It comes to me from the gourmet cooks at Glenhyrst Arts Council in Brantford. It is one of the items they served at their gourmet dinners in connection with the Antique Sale early in May.

BOEUF CELENE
(marinated "eye of the round" stuffed with shrimp)

MARINADE:
1 cup cooking oil
¼ cup soy sauce
1½ tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
1½ tbsp. parsley flakes
1 tsp. black pepper (preferably freshly ground)
¾ cup dry red wine
2 tbsp. lemon juice
¾ tsp. salt

MEAT:
3 lbs. "eye of the round" beef
1 cup shrimp (one 4-oz. can)
1 tbsp. butter
1½ tsp. lemon juice

SAUCE:
½ cup finely sliced onion
½ cup finely sliced mushrooms
¼ cup butter
½ cup dry white wine (or dry red)
⅛ tsp. garlic salt

Twenty-four or 48 hours beforehand mix the marinade. Split the beef lengthwise to within ½" of bottom to "butterfly" it. Pour marinade into a small roasting pan that is a little larger than the piece of meat. (I used one 11x7½".) Place the split meat in it, turn it over and let soak at least 24 hours, preferably 48, turning over frequently.

As mealtime approaches lift meat from marinade and let it drip on a sieve over the marinade for 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, gently saute the drained shrimp in the butter with the lemon juice for about 1 minute. Spoon shrimp into cavity in meat. Close and tie securely with string.

Pour remaining marinade into jar and store covered for another occasion in refrigerator or freezer. Wash and dry the roasting pan you have used for marinating, place meat on small trivet in it and roast at 425 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes. This gives desirable pinkness at centre. DO NOT OVERROAST.

Meanwhile, make Sauce by simmering together all sauce ingredients but wine until onions are barely tender. Add wine, heat through and turn into preheated sauceboat.

Sharpen your carving knife. Transfer Boeuf Celene to preheated platter and cut off strings Cut into ½" thick slices and ladle hot mushroom sauce over each.

Now Try Potato Pizza

POTATO PIZZA
(serves 6)

3 large potatoes
1½ tbsp. butter
½ lb. sliced Mozzarella cheese
⅓ lb. sliced Polish sausage
8 medium mushrooms sliced
10 stuffed olives sliced
One 8-oz. can tomato sauce
1 tsp. oregano
¼ c. grated Parmesan cheese
2 tbsp. oil

Wash, pare and thinly slice potatoes. Cook in minimum amount of water 5 minutes. NO MORE. They must not be tender. Drain.

Spray a 9 inch-deep (1¼") pyrex pie plate with non-stick spray. Melt the butter and pour into pie plate and tip it to butter it all over. Carefully line pie plate with TWO layers of partially cooked potato slices, being sure sides are high and double.

Cover potatoes with sliced Mozzarella BUT do not let it come quite as high on the edge as the potatoes. Cover Mozzarella with the sliced Polish sausage. Next add a layer of sliced mushrooms and then olives.

Mix the tomato sauce with the oregano and spoon ALL over top. Sprinkle all over with Parmesan. Drizzle the oil all over top. Cover snugly with foil. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 1½ hours, BUT remove the foil after 1 hour to allow top to brown a little. Let stand to firm up a little before serving then cut into wedges.

Little wedges of it would be ideal on a cold buffet table. Try it hot as a main course. Then give some thought to making one for a cold summer meal. You will like it.

SUPERDOME —FOR BIRDS

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana's new $163-million Superdome, the world's largest covered arena, is also the world's largest birdhouse.

Its 13 acres of mushroom-contoured steel and concrete house eight pigeons, darlings of bored football fans and despair of defenceless targets sitting on uncovered field-level seats.

Already the Superdome pigeons are well-known New Orleans characters. Local fans whistle and yell support to the soaring birds. Television cameras record their curving flights.

"Get rid of those birds," demanded an irate fan in a letter penned after a couple of preseason football games. "The first time was bad enough. The second time was too much."

Many visitors voice similar complaints about pigeon droppings.

Superdome officials shrug and stay under cover until they can finish closing a huge main door in the south rim of the building through which the birds now come and go.

"Once we get that opening closed up," said Lou Kaposta, a dome spokesman, "we'll be albe to get rid of them."

Kaposta has had more serious fears about the pigeons.

Philippe Petit, a French aerialist, walked across the arching dome on a cable 200 feet above the floor while the pigeons swerved and swooped around the arena. Kaposta feared their flapping might destroy Petit's concentration.

"Fortunately, they stayed well below," he said.

Kaposta thought some of the birds might decide to fly above the 200-foot level to their nests in the rafters, a dizzy sanctuary unreachable by building maintenance workers eager to eliminate the pigeon problem with poison.

Although Superdome officials maintain the pigeons fly outside to feed, they also admit they may be well-fed inside from peanuts and hot-dog buns scattered by the visiting thousands.

Still, Kaposta stoutly asserts from his pigeon-proof office that starvation will do the trick once the door on the south is closed.

With firm optimism, he said: "We used to have about 30 or so of them. Now there's only eight."

This certainly is not shared by all. Mike McAdam of BESCO, the Superdome's engineering services firm, said of the pigeons: "I think they've found a home."

Teachers Walk Out

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 5,000 elementary, high school and junior college teachers in the Montreal suburban area staged walkouts and called in sick Wednesday, disrupting classes for at least 112,000 students. Montreal city schools remained open, however.

The mountain grape.

In the last 10 years, from the vineyards of California and B.C.'s Okanagan Valley, a new kind of wine has established itself among the great wine classifications of the world.

The Mountain wine. Mountain wines are made with grapes grown in upland or hillside vineyards. And while the mountain grape may not grow as prolifically as its cousin grown on the flat valley floor, it compensates by producing a distinctive and finer wine.

At Calona, two of our mountain wines are Mountain White and Mountain Red. Both are made with grapes grown on the upper slopes of our Okanagan Valley vineyards. Wine from these grapes is aged to maturity, then blended to provide wines of great character.

Mountain Red is light in colour and body with a very soft character. An extremely pleasant wine, Mountain White is a quite dry, medium body wine, light in colour, subtle and mellow to the palate. Try a glass of one of our Mountain Wines and see for yourself the difference the mountain grape makes.

Mountain Red. Mountain White. From Calona Wines.

dear abby

Forget Your Height —And Others Will

DEAR ABBY: I've read you for years but this is the first time I've ever written.

I am a 24-year-old girl who is average in every way except one: I stand 6 feet in my stocking feet!

I have many girl friends and some fellows who are friendly, but men never consider me a serious candidate for a romantic paartner. Even guys who are taller than I am treat me like I'm another guy.

When I meet new people, I feel that they accept me — until I stand up and they see how tall I am.

Abby, I know I'm attractive and have a pleasing personality, but I'm getting nowhere.

I am becoming resentful and bitter, and don't know what to do about it. — TOO D—TALL

DEAR TALL: You can turn what you think is a liability into an asset. But first you must start with the top of your lovely height — your mind — because that's where the problem is.

Your self-image is negative, and it reflects in your attitude toward other people.

When you walk in a room, walk tall and smile. Don't grab the nearest chair. Stand and greet everyone you meet with dignity and grace. Whatever you do, don't slump!

When you sit, sit tall and gracefully with your long legs together.

And don't come on too strong with men. Believe me, they'll notice you.

Wear tailored clothes, and don't be afraid to wear bright colors.

Forget your height and others will. You will be judged on how you treat people, not on how high you're stacked.

Now get going and just watch the effect you'll have on others.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of men who run ads in the classified section of a newspaper, reading: "Lonely gent (age, weight, height) wants to meet woman (age range usually much younger) for companionship,. marriage or . . .?"

And what do you think of woman who answer such ads? — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: I think such men must be desperately lonely as well as incredibly foolish to risk possible involvement with some very creepy characters.

And the same goes for women who would answer such ads.

DEAR ABBY: You asked if anyone has ever protested at the point in the marriage service where it says, "If any man can show just cause why they may not lawfully be joined together, let him speak now or forever hold his peace":

Yes, it happened several years ago in Altadena, Calif., when a woman called out, "I protest!"

The Reverend Edward E. Hailwood, who was the rector of the St. Mark's Episcopal Church, did the only thing he could do. He halted the service and had the woman brought to him in the privacy of the sacristy and demanded her reasons.

"I protest in the name of the Father, The Son and the Holy Ghost," she said.

It was obvious that she was deranged, so she was taken out through a side door, and Father Hailwood returned to the church and continued with the wedding. — W. P. IN FRESNO

DEAR ABBY: I am a grown man, college educated and successful in my work. My problem is that I have a horror of flying. Yes, I've tried it, and I die a thousand deaths.

Please don't tell me to see a psychiatrist. I'd rather drive, take a bus or stay home. — Fifty and Frightened.

DEAR FRIGHTENED: Don't be an old "phoby." Phone an airline office and ask if they have (or know of) the program offered to people who are afraid to fly. I understand such a course is available, and it's highly successful. Happy landing!

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS BLENDER SOUP

(Serves four)

2 c. (packed) cut up asparagus (or broccoli) including trimmed stalks
2 c. hot water
¼ bay leaf
2 tbsp. chopped onion (could be bottled)
1 tbsp. chicken soup base (OR 2 chicken bouillon cubes)
4 tbsp. butter
4 tbsp. flour
½ c. 10 per cent cream
½ c. milk (see below)

Combine the prepared asparagus (or broccoli) in a pot with the hot water, bay leaf, onion and chicken soup base or cubes. Bring to boil and simmer, covered, until vegetables are tender — about 15 minutes.

Meanwhile in a large pot make a Tihck White Sauce by melting the butter, stirring in flour until blended, then cream and milk until very thick. Note: If desired use 1 cup homo instead of half cup each cream and milk.

When vegetables are tender drain off and reserve ½ cup of their liquid. Stir remaining vegetable liquid into Thick White Sauce.

Cool the vegetables and the reserved liquid a little (so they do not crack your blender) and tip into blender and buzz until reduced to a smooth puree. Add puree to white sauce and stir to blend. Reheat in top of double boiler or, if over direct heat, stir constantly until boiling.

Serve with sprinkling of Croutons made by toasting ¼" cubes of white bread in oven at 325 deg. Fahr. until golden, stirring frequently to brown evenly.

Pineapple Bran Muffins

1 c. bran flakes
1 c. all bran cereal
2 c. buttermilk (OR soured milk — see below)
2 large eggs
one 19-oz. can crushed pineapple including syrup
½ c. melted margarine or butter
½ c. molasses
2 tsp. vanilla
2¾ c. unsifted all-purpose flour
¾ c. brown sugar, packed
2 tsp. salt
2 tsp. baking soda

NOTE: If you do not have buttermilk measure 2 tablespoons lemon juice or vinegar into a 2-cup measure and fill to 2-cup mark with sweet milk and let stand 10 minutes.

In a large bowl combine the bran flakes, all bran and buttermilk and let soak for 5 minutes. Stir in eggs, crushed pineapple, melted margarine or butter, molasses and vanilla.

In another bowl stir together flour, brown sugar, salt, baking soda. Add to bran mixture but do not beat, just mix.

Fill paper-cup-lined standard muffin tins ⅞ full with batter. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 20 to 25 minutes. Cool on cake racks.

If desired make only 12 muffins and store remaining batter in covered container in refrigerator and dip out and bake as needed. Makes about two dozen.

Mexicans Turn To Birth Curbs

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Family planning experts are claiming some success with an imaginative, madison avenue-type campaign aimed at curbing Mexico's burgeoning population.

The slogan: Let's make ourselves scarce.

If that doesn't happen, warn the statisticians, Mexico's population could jump from the present 60 m illion to 135 million by the year 2000. The rate of increase has been 3.5 per cent per year, one of the world's highest.

"People are becoming aware of the importance of family planning," says Luisa Maria Leal, secretary of the government's national population council.

"Our efforts are paying off."

"The phrase 'birth control' is still taboo," says Miss Leal. "Morally some people find it objectionable. Family planning sounds better."

The campaign uses cartoon characters and drawings to sell the message that smaller families live better. It's carried in newspapers, television, radio, billboards and posters.

One television spot shows the smiling faces of a newly-married couple. The smiles remain when the first and second children are born, but then turn to scowls when No. 3 arrives and, as more children come, all are crying and screaming and the mother is frantic.

A typical poster asks: "Thinking of having a larger family? Then think if everyone will have what he needs and remember: The small family lives better."

Ramon Ojeda Mestre, the national planning council's coordinator general, says that 1.5 million women of child-bearing age are now participating in family planning, an increase of 250,000 over the past year.

But he says the program still has a long way to go before reaching most Mexican women.

Since president Luis Exchverria came out in favor of family planning when he was inaugurated in 1960, public health clinics have given out free birth control pills and other contraceptive devises to those women who want them.

As well, there are free courses for those thinking of marriage with much of the emphasis on family planning.

Ironically, Mexico is the major supplier of birth control pills on the world's market. It manufactures an estimated 40-50 per cent of the pills sold.

Mennonite Aid Plan For Vietnam

WINNIPEG (CP) — An official with the Canadian arm of the Mennonite Central Committee says the organization plans to provide North and South Vietnam with $500,000 in aid this year.

Daniel Zehr, executive secretary of the group, said in an interview a large portion of the funds will go toward drugs for the treatment of veneral disease, drug addiction and leprosy. He said the aid will also provide vegetable seed, powdered milk and school equipment destroyed during the Vietnam War.

Zehr, who recently returned to Canada after a 17-day tour of North and South Vietnam with three members of the organization from the United States, said a total of $1 million in aid had been recommended by the delegation. He said the Canadian branch would probably provide about 50 per cent of the total.

Zehr said he is confident the funds will not be misused by Vietnamese officials.

Zoo — Bear Killed

CALGARY (CP) — The latest addition to the Calgary zoo's polar bear display, a 10-month-old cub, died last week of wounds inflicted by another polar bear, zoo officials have reported.

Sue, who arrived Nov. 12 from Churchill, Man., after her mother was shot, was bitten in the throat by Ralph, a two-year-old male.

"Polar bears have a very aggressive nature — they fight all the time," said Greg Tarry, technical assistant at the zoo. "It could have been just an ordinary scuffle."

Sue was the third polar bear to have died at the zoo in the last two years.

A young female was drowned by an older male in June, 1974, and an adult died earlier this year after a tranquilizer shot had been given.

Sue's death brings the polar bear population at the zoo down to three. But the number may rise later this month when a female is due to cub.

Open Gun Holsters For Edmonton Police

EDMONTON (CP) — Despite objections that the move could create an image of the "American gun-happy policeman," city council Tuesday approved a new police uniform that includes open gun holsters and open-neck shirts.

Police Chief Robert Lunney told council the new uniform style is essential for police comfort and safety. The 40-year-old tunic uniform now in use bound a policeman around his arms and hindered his movement and the existing holster, even though it covered the gun with a flap, was less secure than the open holster used in Calgary.

"We have to have a modern, efficient police force and one of the steps is to modernize equipment," Chief Lunney said. "You can't send policemen out trussed up like turkeys."

David Leadbeater, one of three aldermen who objected to the change, said use of an open holster and nightick on the belt was importing an unwanted American tradition in uniforms which could lead to a view of the policeman on the beat as an "armed unapproachable element" of the law enforcement agency.

"We have to consider the philosophical question and be concerned with image," said Ald. Ed Kennedy. "We don't want it to be an image of the American gun-happy policeman and the problems they have had."

Chief Lunney said he did not read any "significant social change" into a modernized uniform style and holster that was being used by many Western police forces.

"You've got to give us the tools to work with to do the job you want us to do. Policemen on the street are irritated by the uniforms they are wearing now. We've got to give them something that is as comfortable as you're allowed to wear in your work."

He said the new holster, which includes a special fastener that must be unclipped before the gun can be removed, would be worn high on the waist and would be partially obscured by the policeman's arm.

The new uniform also includes a multi-purpose patrol jacket to replace the existing fitted tunic and a parka-style storm coat.

The style change will add $77,000 to the police department's 1976 uniform budget of $160,000.

Man Charged In Hold-Ups

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Chief, 34, of Vancouver has been charged with robbery after two branches of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce were held up five times since mid-October.

The bank's branch at 84 West Hastings was held up on Oct. 21, Oct. 31 and Nov. 10. Each incident involved the same teller.

The bank's branch at 508 West Hastings was robbed on Nov. 18 and Dec. 5. In total nearly $9,000 was taken.

Sergeant Al Cox, head of the robbery squad, said that after the first few holdups police suspected they were dealing with one man, so the two banks were staked out but unsuccessfully.

"One time we had the right bank but the wrong date; the other time we had the right date but the wrong bank," he said.

Watergate Trio Still Free and Busy Writing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost a year after their convictions in the Watergate coverup trial, H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell have not seen the inside of a prison. And chances are they won't in the near future.

Whether they serve any of their 2½-to eight-year sentences is up to the U.S. Court of Appeals. And no matter what the outcome there, the U.S. Supreme Court will be asked for a final decision.

If the Appeal Court upholds the terms set by U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica it could order the sentences to begin immediately. Rarely are defendants granted stays while the Supreme Court hears their cases.

But appeals take time. The three men, along with Robert Mardian, were convicted last New Year's Day and sentenced Feb. 21. It was fall before their appeal briefs reached the six judges who will rule.

Arguments are to begin Jan. 6.

While they await the outcome of their appeals, Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Mitchell have been writing books —Ehrlichman a novel; Mitchell, a work described by a friend as "non-Watergate"; and Haldeman, a book apparently about his White House years, including Watergate.

Haldeman, who as former president Richard Nixon's chief of staff was one of the most powerful men in government, made news briefly in March when he was paid for an interview by CBS. The news centred more on his fee —said to be as much as $100,000—than on what he said.

Ehrlichman, second only to Haldeman among the White House staff, has left his Seattle home and become a near-recluse in Santa Fe, N.M., while working on The Company, a novel about White House intrigue and blackmail. He insists, however, that it is all fiction.

Mitchell, attorney-general under Nixon and twice his campaign manager, returned to the spotlight briefly in October when he testified before the Senate intelligence committee.

And Mardian, whose sentence on one count of conspiring to obstruct justice was 10 months to three years, has dropped out of the public eye, working in his family's heavy-construction business in Phoenix.

If their appeals fail, there is little likelihood that they'll escape serving the minimum 2½ years imposed by Sirica.

"I think the chances for their serving the minimum is 100 per cent if the convictions are affirmed," said the lawyer for one of the men. "If you're thinking of a presidential pardon—that's zero. If you are thinking of judicial clemency, forget it."

REWARD PLEDGED TO AID ANIMALS

CALGARY — A Calgary sports goods dealer who helped police track down the man who killed an elk at the Calgary Zoo a month ago has received a $950 reward.

But Don Lovo said he will donate the reward money to promote animal welfare, adding "at this point I don't really know who needs it and where it will go."

The reward was presented to Lovo by the Calgary Fish and Game Association. It included $500 from the association and $450 donated by the public to enlarge his reward.

The elk was killed at close range with a bow and arrows. The culprit has been convicted and sentenced to six months in jail.

Meanwhile, the person who shot seven big cats at a game farm 45 miles west of Calgary, a few days after the Calgary Zoo incident is still at large.

GENOA — The kidnapped son of a walthy sugar refinery owner said in a message to this family Wednesday that his abductors threatened to cut off two of his fingers unless $2.9 million ransom was paid.

"The kidnapppers demand is certainly high, but with your help, relatives and friends, and especially with help from grandfather, the figure certainly can be collected," Giovanni Schiaffino, 20, said in a message published in the newspaper Il Secolo.

★ ★ ★

NEW DELHI — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's youngest son, Sanjay, joined the top hierarchy of India's governing Congress party Wednesday, marking his formal entry into politics. The 28-year-old former automobile designer, named to the executive committee of the party's youth wing, has emerged as a close advisor to his mother.

★ ★ ★

FRANKFURT — A man who went to sleep in an apartment building garbage container was hauled to safety Wednesday minutes before the trash was dumped into a furnace, police said.

The man climbed into the garbage Tuesday night to sleep off his evening's drinking and closed the container's cover, police said.

The container was emptied into a garbage truck and taken to a furnace plant supplying heating steam for much of Frankfurt where the man was dumped 30 feet down a shaft.

Luckily, the operator of the mechanical shovel feeding the furnace heard his cries and hauled him out.

OLDHAM, England — A few juicy swear words, expressed at the right time, can help immigrants feel more at home in their new country.

At least that is what a government-sponsored language school here feels. The school is teaching immigrants in this mill town the art of cursing.

Language teacher David Birkett, who is giving special swearing lessons, says: "A lot of swearing goes on and a newcomer has to feel he belongs."

★ ★ ★

SYDNEY, Australia — Restaurant owner Peter Beattie has been told to stop serving fried snake or face prosecution.

Beattie, who has a floating restaurant on the Murray River in the town of Swan Hill, serves up about 80 feet of snake a week.

The river forms the border between the states of New South Wales, where many snakes are protected, and Victoria, where they are not.

The New South Wales Wildlife Service has told Beattie he will be prosecuted if he dishes up New South Wales snakes.

Beattie, who has been serving fried snake for 11 years, says his problem is that he cannot tell which side of the border snakes come from.

Canadian Folk Artists Share Springridge Bill

Two folk artists well known across Canada will make a joint appearance at Springridge Theatre Friday.

Beverly Glenn-Copeland describes her music as a combination of African rhythms, North American melodies and European harmonies. She brings about this integration by self-accompaniement of her songs on piano, six and 12-string guitars and drums.

Sharing the program is Brent Titcomb whose specialty is comedy and folk songs. He started playing in the early sixties, formed a group called Three's a Crowd and played both the Canada Pavillion and Ontario Pavillion at Expo '67.

After the group broke up in 1967 Titcomb says he put away his guitar and did animated voices and mouth harp on TV commercials.

He staged managed at the CNE, finally started playing again and writing songs, some of which were recorded by Anne Murray, Karen Jones and Tommy Graham.

He played the Mariposa Folk Festival for two years and was vocalist with the Edmonton Symphony for three seasons.

He says he is embarking on a solo album but also continues to do voices and mouth harp on commercials—"the ones I can believe in."

Beverly is a superb vocalist with a background of classical music study at McGill University. She turned from classical music writing and performing her own songs in 1968 and is now exploring the sounds of a band and the stimulation of the stage show.

She has made appearances at major concert halls from Winnipeg to Halifax and on Canadian network TV and radio programs.

Friday's concert starts at 8:30 p.m. Tickets will be available at the door.

Dubois Guarantee: No Holdups at Their Bank

MONTREAL (CP) — "I'd die before I'd pay protection," a Montreal bar owner told the Quebec police commission inquiry into organized crime Wednesday as it continued public hearings into the activities of a reputed criminal family.

Lester Hogan, 60, manager of a bar in the city's southwest region for more than 15 years, testified he has resisted all attempts to pay protection money to the Dubois brothers, described in earlier testimony as leaders of a gang controlling criminal activity in the area.

"I wouldn't be able to look my boys in the eye if I had (made payments)," he told the inquiry. "The best protection a guy can have is his reputation."

However a bank manager in the same area, Jean Caron, testified he co-operated with the Dubois brothers because of their reputation.

The manager explained that during his assignment in the district between July, 1971 and Oct. 1972, "I loaned the Dubois, or individuals they acted as guarantor for, more than $40,000 despite the fact they were on my bank's blacklist."

Caron testified he broke another bank rule when he granted Normand Dubois $6,000 credit to purchase a new car.

"The policy was that no personal loan exceed $5,000," but he thought it wiser to deal with the Dubois because "of the reputation they had in the area."

Caron said four of the nine Dubois brothers, Adrien, Maurice, Raymond and Normand, had accounts at his branch of the Provincial Bank of Canada.

He testified that either Raymond or Normand once told him that "you won't have any holdups here as long as we're your customers." And, the manager added, "we didn't have any either."

Caron also said that when a debtor, given credit on a Dubois signature, defaulted, "we notified both the delinquent customer and the Dubois. . . . Payment was always made after this."

The manager said his decision to extend credit to the Dubois brothers, though in violation of orders from head office, was a continuation of a policy established by his predecessors.

However, he conceded he made no attempt to cut down on the financial assistance to the brothers.

The inquiry also heard from two juveniles, a 16-year-old boy who testified he had been peddling stolen goods through the Dubois family since he was nine, and a 15-year-old girl who said her boyfriend carried out auto thefts for the family.

The inquiry continues today.

Iraq Gov't Nationalizes Oil Assets

CAIRO (AP) — Iraq's government has nationalized British, French and Dutch assets in the Basra Petroleum Co., gaining full control of the country's oil wealth.

The companies affected are British Petroleum Corp., France's state company l'Entreprise de Research et d'Activities Petrolieres ERAP and the Royal Dutch Shell Oil Co., Iraqi diplomatic sources said.

The Basra Petroleum Co. is an offshoot of Iraqi Petroleum Co. (IPC) and was formerly represented by a consortium of British, Dutch, French and American oil companies together with the Gulbenkian oil family.

Each of the foreign oil firms held 23.75 per cent of the assets, the remaining five belonging to the Gulbenkian interests, the sources said.

The American interests, jointly owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey and Mobil Oil Corp., those of the Gulbenkians and part of the Dutch interests were nationalized by Iraq following the 1973 Middle East war, the sources said.

CLC Plans To Renew IWY Hopes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress (CLC) Wednesday announced plans for a national conference here March 5-7 so "the hopes and promises of Interantional Women's Year won't fade with the end of 1975."

In a statement the organization urged the government to improve federal human rights legislation.

"Equal remuneration, including fringe benefits, for work of equal value must become the law of the land," it said.

The statement added that the CLC feels a quota hiring system similar to that used in the United States to protect minorities, should be used in Canada to boost the position of women in the labor force.

The CLC also feels that "political opinion, handicaps irrelevant to the job and lack of Canadian citizenship by those admitted as permanent residents should be added to the prohibited grounds of discrimination."

The statement als urged revision of the Indian Act, which it says discriminates against native women.

Science 'Excited' Over Molecule

OTTAWA (CP) — Four Canadian astronomers have found a molecule in interstellar space which leads them to believe in the possibility that the basis of life as we know it can exist in that harsh environment.

The molecule, cyanodiacetyene, is the heaviest yet found in space, said Takeshi Oka, N. W. Broten, Lorne Avery and J. M. MacLeod.

The four members of the National Research Council (NRC) Herzberg Institute of Astrophysics said in a recent interview that the weight of the molecule and its length mean that molecules which scientists previously thought would not survive the cold, near-vacuum conditions of interstellar space may exist.

And one could be glycine — which has a molecular weight of 75, equal to cyanodiacetylene — and is one of the building blocks of protein.

Formal announcement of the molecule discovery was made simultaneously Wednesday in Ottawa and in Chicago at the annual meeting of the American Astronomical Society.

"We're very excited about this discovery because it opens up so many doors," Broten said.

"Before this we thought the radiation in space broke down these relatively longer chain molecules and only allowed compact molecules to exist. Now we can begin looking for longer and heavier molecules than we previously thought could survive out there."

The cloud of cynodiacetylene molecules was found in the constellation Sagittarius B2 near the centre of our galaxy Nov. 12 by a NRC radio telescope in Algonquin Park.

NEW FIND 'OPENS MANY DOORS'

"Almost all of the 35 or so molecules that have been found in interstellar space have been found there," Broten said.

"We think this may be because the dust in this constellation blocks the ultraviolet light and produces a wide range of physical temperatures necessary for all these different molecules to exist."

Broten said the discovery of molecules in interstellar space raises fascinating questions for astronomers.

"We don't know how much molecules form in the relative emptiness of space, where the pieces come from and how they come together," he said.

Oka said the cyanodiateylene could not have been found by as optical telescope because the dust in the constellation would have blocked its view.

He added that the search for molecules is basically a trial and error proposition.

"I figure out the radio frequencies that possible molecules would emit and then it is a matter of searching for these frequencies," he said.

"The radio signals for cyanodiacetylene were faint, but we got them."

Sagittarius B2, where the signals came from is 30,000 light years away. A light year is the distance light travels in a year or about 5.88 million million miles.

HOAX MAN HELD

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — FBI agents have arrested an escaped convict who allegedly gypped the CBS television network out of $10,000 by promising to lead cameramen to the body of former teamster boss James Hoffa.

Clarence Medlin, who claimed he was a former Hoffa bodyguard, was arrested without resistance Wednesday at a downtown motel. He was held without bail for return to a federal "halfway house" in Greensboro, N.C., where he had been serving a 10-year sentence for interstate transportation of a stolen vehicle.

Loanshark Menace Tip of Iceberg

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The Co-Ordinated Law Enforcement Unit (CLEU) has started sinking its teeth into an area of crime that has always remained well-embedded in the criminal underworld — loansharking.

And what the CLEU investigators are finding is far from palatable. They believe loansharking is replacing gambling as the chief activity and money-maker for organized crime in the province.

There is no way they can prove this because the examination of the extent of the crime is too new, to superficial. But having scratched the surface they've uncovered a welter of suspected loansharking activity — an emerging shadow that poses a much greater menace than most people might have thought.

CLEU felt the discovery so important that loansharking was the lead item in its Second Finding report released earlier this month.

The report suggests that police forces should be encouraged to set up special squads to combat the predatory loanshark.

But the police forces in Greater Victoria appear lukewarm to the idea.

Victoria police chief Jack Gregory says he doesn't think the problem is serious enough here to warrant a special squad.

"The men are too busy now working at top capacity."

He couldn't recall a single instance of loansharking in the 10 years he's been chief.

Gregory said that without complaints from the public there was little the police could do.

"If loansharking is occurring we would hope the victims would feel free to notify the department . . . we'd guarantee as much anonymity as possible."

But according to CLEU, the loanshark's victim is not about to talk to the authorities for fear of reprisals.

Because of the victim's reticence, CLEU investigators indicate the loansharking problem can ever be assessed let alone unearthed until police forces start digging.

Vancouver police did. In a few months they discovered 24 separate instances. They were also able to identify eight loansharking organizations, one operated by a tapman and beer waiter in a Lower mainland hotel.

The interest rates charged the victims ranged from a low of 10 per cent a week to as high as 40 per cent a week.

The victim's dilemma isn't hard to imagine. The CLEU report cites the extreme case of a Vancouver stock salesman, who in three years borrowing money to finance various stock schemes, found himself $900,000 in debt.

He claimed he paid interest of $3,500 a week and that it had been "suggested" the rate be increased to $5,000. It was esimated it would cost him $14 million to pay off the debt.

As a reminder of his position in relation to the loanshark he was violently assaulted some time later.

Victims who do not maintain their payments may be forced to take part in robberies; women may be forced into prostitution.

In one case, the report said, a girl's arm was broken because her boy-friend had fallen behind in his payments. In another a victim had his finger torn off for the same reason.

Places of entertainment and industrial plants are favored haunts of the preying loanshark, the report says.

The problem from the law enforcer's standpoint is that most of the principals involved have been able to operate with impunity because victims seldom agree to testify.

Where charges are laid, the Small Loans Act has not been invoked. The act, envisioned as a protection against loanshark activity, needs to be strengthened, CLEU investigators feel.

Bill Nielsen, deputy minister of consumer affairs for B.C., said his department is attempting to stimulate public awareness of the pitfalls and dangers of borrowing money.

A case in point, he said, is the tax rebater problem which his department made public earlier this year. He noted there were rebaters charging anywhere from 60 to 400 per cent interest.

"Of course it's usurious . . . and the the sad thing is these people can do it with impunity."

CLEU emphasizes the need for more publicity, especially of those programs available to help the person who finds himself hopelessly in debt.

For instance, there's the loan scheme operated by the British Columbia Central Credit Union, making loans of up to $3,000 available to low-income credit union members at an interest rate of six per cent a year.

Since the scheme started in November, 1973, between 450 and 500 persons have benefitted from the low interest loans and the financial management counselling they must to take along with it.

Not all of the people receiving help from the credit unions have been victims of loansharks, but some have been.

"The way I see it we've only scratched the surface," a credit union official said. "I'm sure there is a considerable amount of loansharking going on in the province.

"The difficulty is so many people seem to be ignorant of the resources here to help them.

"Many appear to have the impression that because they are low earners they are unable to get loans from regualr institutions.

"But the fact is, they can."

Robbery Charged

NANAIMO — A 36-year-old Nanaimo man was charged in provincial court Wednesday with the Tuesday afternoon robbery of the terminal park branch of the Bank of Montreal.

Larry Lasa Egolstein was remanded in custody to Friday when an application for bail is expected to be made. No plea was entered.

Egolstein was arrested in downtown Nanaimo 35 minutes after the incident.

Police recovered $1,292, the full amount taken in the robbery.

BEAUTY PRESERVED

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A technician at Queen's University has discovered a process that has preserved orchids and other flowers in their natural form for up to three years.

Jack Webb, chief technician of the bilology department, was given the job in 1972 of finding a way of preserving orchids so they would retain their color when suspended in a liquid.

Experimenting with various chemicals, he has been able to preserve the color and texture of orchids, lock the chlorophyll in a leaf to keep it soft and supple, retain the needles on a conifer twig and preserve a caterpillar without loss of shape or color.

Dr. Michael Bristow, associate professor of biology at Queen's uses the preserved plants for study.

"Now it's possible to show students the beauty of the thing—the esthetic angle of plant anatomy because the method of preservation is so simple," Dr. Bristow said. "You dunk the thing into the formula, take it out a day later and it is all there."

Although the plants lose their scent, Webb said they are durable enough to be passed from hand to hand and studied minutely in a classroom, then returned to be stored with other objects for further use.

"After three years, there is no deterioration," he said. "I don't know how long the preserved specimens will last."

He said that with a combination of chemicals, a dehydration process takes place. The treatment "holds the chain of carbons in the plant instead of what usually happens—a breakdown."

You be the Judge!
Many car companies are advertising Gas Mileage (E.P.A. Ratings) up to 50 miles per gallon. This sounds like fantastic savings. But is it really?
COMPARE!
Have you figured out just how little the yearly saving really is . . . look at it this way, the difference between 35 M.P.G. and 50 M.P.G. over 10,000 miles of driving, using 80¢ per gallon for gas—the actual saving over the year is $68.56. (Most people drive an average of 10,000 miles per year.)
Yes! You be the judge!
Let us show you what we mean. Come in and compare the 1976 Dodge Cars NOW! Ask yourself is this worth giving up comfort and luxury for? Plus 12-month unlimited mileage warranty . . . The first year's on us.

Shrub Dryness Still Problem

Another reminder that plants and gardens need attention in all sorts of weather and at all times during the year, triggered by a call from the owner of an acreage where certain large shrubs had suddenly developed a droopy, slickly appearance.

A visit to the property quickly dispelled any doubts as to the cause of the trouble. The shrubs in question formed a foundation planting for a low ranch-style dwelling with wide eaves. There were all the indications of dryness at the roots.

In view of the heavy rainfall over the past few weeks the owner was not prepared to accept lack of water as the cause. It seemed beyond any sound reasoning that a patch of soil could be dry after five inches of rain in three days.

Where doubt exists as to the amount of moisture in the soil there is one way to uncover the facts. Dig a hole between plants, well away from the roots, and find out first hand the conditions twelve to fourteen inches below soil level.

In this instance, test holes showed dust dry conditons at the back of the plantings against the concrete foundation, and a maximum of four inches of damp soil at the front edge. Nowhere around the house was there any moisture at the fourteen inch level.

While this condition could be considered ideal for foundations it certainly is not suitable for living plants, especially broad-leaved evergreens which transpire moisture from their leaves at all times, and heavily when the relative humidity is low in dry cold weather (34 per cent a few weeks ago), and in strong winds.

The suggested remedy was to get out the garden hoses which had been neatly stored for the winter, lay the open ends at the roots of each shrub in turn, starting with those nearest the foundation.

Each hose would have to be moved about four times to cover the root area of these large shrubs, and left in place for at least one hour on every move with the water gently trickling so as not to cause run-off.

If the expected improvement was apparent after a day or so, the entire planting could be surface-watered with a small sprinkler at very low pressure to add moisture to the soil areas between the plants.

A thorough soaking now, and another during a mild spell in January (which usually means a rainy period) should see the plants safely through the winter. In March, regular watering should be started.

The owner has just called to say the shrubs showed immediate improvement, and the surface sprinkling stage is now in progress. He is very happy with the results and feels that other gardeners with foundation plantings under wide eaves should be warned of the conditions that most likely exist in their gardens.

Another problem area is permanent planters set in recessed entrances, a common feature in structural design over the past decade. It has been used on commercial buildings as well as homes.

In the downtown area many planters of this type can only be described as a mess during winter, an eyesore rather than an attraction because they are never watered.

To continue living, all plants with foliage over winter must be able to obtain food, and can only do so when that food is dissolved in water. Therefore watering in winter is as important as watering in summer when the plants are under cover, excepting that two or three good soakings are usually sufficient.

The whole problem hinges on our mental approach to watering, summed up by the gardener who said: "You say I should water when it is raining? If I did that my neighbors would have no more doubts about my sanity."

So often with gardeners, what the neighbors will think is more important than the job that should be done.

BROOME HILL

A lovely name for a beautiful subdivision where new homes are springing up. The low lot prices have allowed our builders to sell $10,000 below any competitor. You can buy a new car and unlimited gasoline for the real savings on low down payment, less mortgage ($100 per month at least) and low taxes. Start building an equity in real property now, beat inflation and live happily. In two years or so you may want to trade for something closer to town but you probably won't because Sooke is beautiful and I love it enough to live there myself. Three homes to choose from at $48,900.

CRB to Examine Farmland Division

The Capital Regional Board decided Wednesday to take a closer look at whether dividing farmland into smaller plots contravenes the intention of the Agricultural Land Reserve.

After hearing from director Donald MacLaurin of Central Saanich, the board postponed decisions on two such appeals which the board's local planning and zoning committeee had recommended be rejected.

In both cases the land would remain with the ALR but in smaller parcels.

MacLaurin said the cases presented the board with a curious dilemma because rejecting the appeals would mean the region was moving contrary to municipal zoning.

Both cases are in Central Saanich and have the support of council there. The regional committee favored rejecting them because it sees them as contrary to the objectives of the Land Commission Act — maintaining large land parcels for farming purposes.

MacLaurin noted that 80 per cent of land in Central Saanich is zoned rural and preservation of farmland has strong support from council.

But for years council has had two zoning categories allowing 10-acre and five-acre minimums and aldermen don't believe these reduce the amount of land in agriculture.

If the regional committee's interpretation of the act's intention is right, then the zoning categories are meaningless, he said. But a search of the legislation, regulations and discussions by him has failed to turn up anything which specifies making farmland plots smaller is against the rules.

The board instructed its planning and zoning committee to study the question.

CUNNINGHAM INQUEST OPENS, ADJOURNED

Victoria General Hospital pathologist Dr. Bruce Hay told a coroner's jury Wednesday night Malcolm Preston Cunningham had been shot six times, several in the back, with a large calibre rifle.

The body of Cunningham, 22, was found Dec. 2 fully clothed, in an advanced state of decomposition, and lying face down in the bush near the E and N railway tracks just south of Goldstream Park.

Gerald Cove, a train conductor, testified he spotted the body as he rode in the top cabin of the caboose of a slow-moving northbound freight.

Police believe Cunningham, who was identified through criminal fingerprint records, had been shot elsewhere in early November and then dumped at the site.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to Feb. 10 to give the RCMP more time for their investigation.

New Faculty Discussed

University of Victoria officials are discussing the creation of a new faculty to coordinate the university's four new professional schools and possibly the department of education.

A recommendation to UVic senate urges that the directors of four professional schools, child care, nursing, public administration and social welfare meet with the faculty of education to discuss formation of the faculty next year.

John Dewey, dean of academic affairs, said under the proposal UVic president Dr. Howard Petch would choose a chairman of the new body.

The faculty under a joint council would co-ordinate programs and plan for the existing schools in an orderly fashion and provide leadership in inter-disciplinary research.

The common objective of the four schools is to prepare people for careers, primarily in the public service.

Dewey said there is no reason to delay a decision on the faculty for human and social services and once the faculties are joined together, the university should start considering a new name for the faculty.

UVic officials have also received a recommendation from UVic senator Dr. Dan Daniels to abolish the faculty of graduate studies.

In a notice of motion for the next Senate meeting in January Daniels says there is no need for a faculty particularly for graduate studies.

Graduate student research comes under the jurisdiction of particular faculties and there is no separate financial structure for graduate studies, says Daniels.

He does, however, suggest the position of dean of graduate studies held by former UVic vice-president Stephen Jennings, be retained.

Two Extra Months

A young man whose car dragged a pedestrian more than nine blocks before the driver disengaged the body and fled had his jail sentence increased by two months to five months Wednesday in B.C. Court of Appeal.

Frankie Leung, 19, of 1765 Rockland, was found guilty by a jury last month in county court of criminal negligence in the death Dec. 15, 1974 of Abraham Thomas, who was struck on Pandora Avenue.

He pleaded guilty to a charge of failing to remain at the scene of an accident and Judge E. J. C. Stewart sentenced him to two months on the criminal negligence offence and two weeks concurrent for hit-run.

Prosecutor Brian Smith carried an appeal to Mr. Justice H. A. Maclean, Mr. Justice M. M. McFarlane and Mr. Justice Angelo Branca, who were unanimous in raising the sentence.

"Aren't they goin' to have Thanksgiving this year, Mommy?"

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As will be observed, the bidding in today's deal was most peculiar. But, as will also be observed, the peculiar bidding resulted in a very handsome profit. The hand arose in a team-of-four match.

East-West vulnerable. East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♦	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	2 ♦	Pass	3 ♣
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♥.

North-South were employing the Roth-Stone System of bidding, in which one is not permitted to open the bidding in a major suit unless he has at least five cards in that suit. Nor is he permitted to open the bidding in a two-card suit. Hence, South, having an opening hand, had no choice but to open with one diamond.

Systematically, when North responded with two clubs (a new suit at the two level), he guaranteed that he would bid again (except if South bid a game). So South could rebid anything that appealed to his fancy. He concluded that if North had a four-card major suit, he would bid it at his next turn; and that if North didn't have a major suit, the hand would be played at notrump.

So South, trying to inhibit a diamond lead, chose to rebid his mangy three-card diamond suit. North, quite naturally, rebid his club suit, and South just as naturally now bid three notrump.

I don't think anyone would criticize West for choosing to lead a heart. Certainly, in view of the bidding, any thoughts of a diamond lead were dismissed very quickly. With the heart lead, South scampered home with two overtricks: seven clubs, two hearts, and one spade trick were taken. Had West led a diamond, the defenders would have cashed the first five tricks in this suit.

When the deal was replayed, South opened the bidding with one spade, North responded with two clubs, South rebid two hearts, and North then bid four clubs. South, with a figurative shrug of the shoulders, raised to five clubs. As is evident, this contract was there for the taking, declarer's only losers being two diamond tricks.

If the result can serve as the criterion of right and wrong, the notrump game was superior, since the trick score (with two overtricks) was 160 points, while the trick score for five clubs was 100 points. Do you agree? I don't.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, Dec. 12, 1975

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Expand but be sure you have legal green light. Gain cooperation of partner, mate. Money question is resolved if you take time to understand — and explain. Cancer, Capricorn figure prominently. You'll gain if you are aware of values, tax situations, attitude of one close to you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Highlight versatility without scattering efforts. What occurs behind scenes is more important than usual. Know it and ask questions. If discreet, you learn and profit. Visit one confined to home or hospital.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be specific; check details. Take nothing for granted. Friend with weight problem confides domestic dilemma. Be interested without becoming inextricably involved. A wish is granted, but you work for it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Read between the lines. Someone is trying to tell you something. Professional superior observes, agrees to change. Be ready, willing and able — know you can do it and exude confidence. Status quo is due for shakeup.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Adjustment at home base may be necessary. Accent is on travel, messages, publications and long-range plans. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio could figure prominently. Member of opposite sex boosts morale. Count your blessings — and your change!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Refine techniques. Stop wasting emotional energy on situation out of your hands. A relative who whines about money is seeking attention — and maybe a loan to boot! Look for hidden meanings. What you discover could be a revelation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What seems a "sure thing" could be something entirely different. Be prepared for upsets in form. Build, organize, accept added responsibility. Delegating duties now would be an error. Cancer, Capricorn figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish rather than initiate — close transaction. Someone may be attempting a coup, a secret maneuver. Keep your antenna up — don't feel that hiding facts will make situation go away. Aries, Libra and Pisces figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Highlight greater independence, creativity. Love feelings expand — you will be fulfilled. Participation, involvement replaces any "emptiness." Means you become more of a person, dedicated and with purpose.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The more penurious you might be now, the better for you. Means save for that proverbial rainy day. You need not impress others. Be true to yourself — strive to improve prospects for security. Cancer individual plays important role.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Friend, who knows some of your relatives, says something controversial. Don't lose sense of humor. Laugh at your own foibles — and those of your family. Authority figure talks of travel — be receptive and cooperative.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Specific steps, regarding money, can be taken — be direct, creative. Aquarius, Taurus and Scorpio persons figure prominently. You learn where bread is buttered — means you discover truth about money and how it gets that way — where you are involved.

IF DEC. 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have sense of humor, are a good traveler, versatile, a character analyst, a writer, an individual who is capable of functioning under crisis conditions. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. New start made this year will pay dividends. If single, marriage is on horizon. Married or single, expect added responsibility — June will be your most significant month in 1976.

Fish Destroyed

LONDON (Reuter) — A London court ordered the destruction of 47 pounds of fugu fish, a Japanese delicacy, after being told Wednesday that eating it was "like playing Russian roulette." A marine biologist told the court that of the 27 known types of fugu fish, only two have been established as nontoxic. About 100 persons a year die from eating the fish in Japan, he said.

Australian MD Predicts Pill Ban

MELBOURNE (Reuter)— An Australian neurologist says he believes doctors will stop prescribing the contraceptive pill within two years because of adverse side effects.

Dr. John Billings, head of the department of neurology at St. Vincent's Hospital here, told the royal commission on human relationships that recent research suggests a relationship between oral contraceptives and limb defects in baby boys.

Side effects being found in research are "far more serious" than previously thought, he said Wednesday.

Billings said limb defects are similar to those that resulted from thalidomide treatment.

"A five-to-seven-fold increase in these defects has been reported in infants born of women who have been exposed to sex steroids early in pregnancy," he told the commission.

Among other effects are vomiting, abdominal cramps, breast changes and changes in menstrual flow, cervical erosion, jaundice, allergy rashes, headaches, dizziness, drowsiness and appetite changes.

Billings predicts that the pill will be withdrawn from medical practice in Australia within two years.

Prof. John Llewellyn-Jones, associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Sydney University, said, however, that Billings' comments will cause women needless anxiety.

"One should stress the pill's most significant benefit to more than 50 million women around the world—the ability to choose pregnancy."

PILLS WITHDRAWN

LONDON (Reuter) — Two birth control pills are being withdrawn in Britain following evidence that a hormone in them has produced cancer tumors in beagle bitches.

Volidan 21 and Serial 28, available here since 1963 and 1967 respectively are taken by about 75,000 woman—about three per cent of women using contraceptive pills in Britain.

Evidence of a possible link with cancer — the first for a contraceptive pill—came from the United States where beagle bitches were fed up to 50 times the human dose of the hormone, megestrol-acetate, continuously over seven years. Some developed cancerous breast tumors.

The manufacturer, Duncan Flockhart, a subsidiary of the Glaxo Co., is withdrawing them in Britain and said the pills also are being withdrawn in other countries.

In West Berlin, West Germany's federal health bureau today banned the manufacture and sale of contraceptive pills containing megestrol-acetate.

A spokesman for the bureau said tests on animals have shown that the chemical caused tumors of the breast. The ban, effective immediately, will be reviewed when further test results are available.

OTTAWA — The Trudeau government was trapped today between the danger of a renewed postal strike and the need to break its own anti-inflation guidelines.

The crunch came Wednesday when the Anti-Inflation Board rejected the settlement that ended a six week strike by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

The settlement, which provided for a 38 per cent pay increase over 30 months, was well in excess of the government's eight per cent a year guide but in line with a contract obtained by mail carriers a few months ago.

The cabinet will meet tonight in an unusual session to decide whether to over-rule the board.

After a four-hour cabinet meeting today, Prime Minister Trudeau told reporters that "they (the board) are going to send us a reasoned desicion this afternoon. Sometime tonight we will have to give them a reasonable answer."

If cabinet over-rules the Anti-Inflation Board, much of the Board's credibility would be shattered and other groups would certainly attempt to exceed the pay guidelines.

On the other hand, attempts to renew contract negotiations would almost certainly lead to another CUPW walkout.

The union can still strike legally until the agreement is signed.

The Anti-Inflation Board Wednesday made no formal announcement that it had rejected the agreement between the Post Office and CUPW.

However, it became generally known that the board had turned thumbs down.

Prime Minister Trudeau said the board had contacted several cabinet ministers and, he understood, the union—to

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's 2,200 air traffic controllers are seeking a 20 per cent wage increase in a one-year contract, Bill Robertson, vice-president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said Wednesday.

The present contract expires at the end of this month and controllers have not yet sought the services of a conciliation board.

Gov't Lifts Ceilings On Subsidized Homes

Times News Services

OTTAWA New price ceilings for houses under the government's subsidized home ownerhsip plan were announced today by Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson.

The new maximum in Victoria is $45,000, up $3,000 from $42,000.

In Vancouver and Toronto, it has been raised to $47,000 from $43,000.

Danson released to the Commons welfare committee the new price limits which amount to an increase of as much as 10 per cent in some areas.

An aide to Danson said the limits were kept within federal anti-inflation guides.

In some places, there is no increase in the ceilings under the assisted home ownership program.

Houses above the price ceilings cannot qualify under AHOP and buyers cannot get interest-reducing payments from the federal government.

Builders have complained that the limits were too low in high-cost housing areas like Toronto and Vancouver.

Few buyers could take advantage of AHOP in these places.

Price limits in other metropolitan areas with current maximums in brackets: Calgary, $36,000 ($33,000); Edmonton, $36,000, ($33,000; Halifax, $38,500 ($36,000; Hamilton $43,000 ($41,000).

Montreal $31,500 ($29,000); Ottawa-Hull, $38,000, ($35,000); Regina, $35,000 ($34,000).

Winnipeg, $35,600, ($33,000); Cranbrook, $33,000 ($32,000); Kelowan, $34,000 ($32,000).

Prince George, $39,000 ($37,000); Red Deer, Alta., $30,500 ($28,000); Yellowknife, N.W.T., $43,500, ($39,500; and the Yukon Territory, $41,000 ($39 000).

The federal anti-inflation progam permits price increases only to cover higher production costs.

IT ISN'T LEAKS from City Hall that worry Toronto aldermen. It's leaks at City Hall. Councillors Reid Scott and David Smith share a brolly while nearby bucket catches drips from the leaking roof at $31 million structure. About $62,000 has been spent to fix the roof but the rain keeps coming through.

2 ICBC MEN CHARGED IN FRAUD CASE

VANCOUVER (CP) — An adjuster and an estimator with the Insurance Corporation of B.C. (ICBC) along with the office manager of a Richmond body shop are to appear in Vancouver provincial court Jan. 12, charged with conspiring to defraud ICBC.

Stuart Trober, 30, an ICBC adjuster; David Sharma, 30, an estimator; Stanley Kadlex, 25, office manager of Tri Starr Collision Repairs Ltd. of 375 No. 3 Road, Richmond, and the body shop itself are charged.

The charge says they conspired to defraud ICBC of money by submitting "doucments which did not accurately reflect the amount of work performed, parts supplied and/or costs incurred" in repairing certain cars between Feb. 1 and May 30 this year.

In addition, Trober and Sharma face a second count of conspiring with John Carson, 24, and Michael Davis, 19, to defraud ICBC of $959 by submitting false insurance claims.

Trober also faces another count of conspiring with Spencer Rea, 29, Peter Humphrys, 31, Davis and Carson to defraud ICBC of $2,132 by submitting false insurance claims.

Price Index Still Jumping

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The cost of living continued to rise steeply in November, mainly because of higher prices for shelter, transportation and food, Statistics Canada reported today.

The consumer price index rose nine-tenths of one per cent in November, the same as the jump recorded in October. There had been a one-month respite in September, when the index rose only two-tenths of one per cent, following a chain of successive sharp monthly rises during the summer.

The November figures come as the anti-inflation board is rushing to develop its price monitoring system and is under continuing criticism from union leaders and others that it won't be effective in controlling prices. The board has already turned down several proposed wage increases, including the postal workers' contract, because they exceeded rises allowed by the anti-inflation program.

The November increase set an annual inflation rate of 10.4 per cent.

Statistics Canada said increased shelter costs for both owned and rented accommodation accounted for much of the 1.0 per cent rise in the non-food price index. Shelter costs rose 0.1 per cent in the month.

The 1.9 per cent rise in the transportation component largely reflected higher new car prices which were up 3.4 per cent over the year-end 1975 model prices.

Increased housing and transportation costs accounted for two-thirds of the total increase in the consumer price index.

The price changes pushed the value of a 1971 dollar down to only 69 cents.

Food prices increased 0.6 per cent during the month, as did cost of clothing. Health and personal care costs climbed 1.0 per cent while the indices for recreation, education and reading and also those of tobacco and alcohol products each edged up 0.2 per cent.

Partially responsible for the small increase in food prices was the decline in cost of sugar, which was 47 per cent cheaper than a year ago.

'Baby, Just Wait'

"Crowded right now? Baby just you wait."

That's the well-aimed family planning message in Indonesia, the Unitarian Service Committee's newest field of co-operation with an overwhelming population of 180,000,00.

Indonesia has an average density of 1,660 persons for every square mile. Health care, education and family planning have been chosen as the joint USC-government goals.

Despite government pledges to erect 10,000 three-room schools before January 1976, more than three million children will go without schooling.

At the Aria Putra Children's home, targets are to provide primary health care in Klomkok, Central Java; to provide a three-year subsidy for health services until the home's membership grows and to grant assistance in community development.

The USC has also been asked to sponsor a vocational training program to construct a two-storey building containing four rooms to be attached to the Muhammadiyah Vocational Training Centre established in 1912. Since its inception the centre has already created 7,000 schools.

A survey conducted earlier this year by USC executive director Lotta Hitschmanova, and special adviser Dr. Gordon Merrill, found that although family planning is a basic policy of the government the density of population has prompted the goal of reducing the current 2.8 per cent annual growth rate to 2 per cent, hopefully by the year 2,000.

The government is asking for assistance from abroad and there is a national family planning co-ordinating board working in the country.

Large billboards in Jakarta promote family planning and the Indonesian coin in greatest use carries a symbol of family planning. In that country, too, women hold key positions in and outside the government and take their women's rights for granted, says Dr. Hitschmanova.

Another sign in use in Indonesia clarifies further the family planning message: "The population bomb is everybody's baby."

Donations can be made at any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, mailed to the Victoria Times, Box 300, Victoria, or brought to the office at 2621 Douglas.

NEWS BRIEFS

3 Hotels Seized

BEIRUT (UPI) — Leftist militiamen, shrugging off a newly arranged cease-fire, seized three strategic hotels today in a thundering assault on right-wing forces and Lebanese army troops.

Cod War Shooting

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — An Icelandic gunboat, rammed by three British protection vessels, fired on a British tug today in the latest incident in the long standing "cod war" between the two countries, Iceland's coast guard said.

6 Bodies Found

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Six bodies were found by the side of a road today, each riddled with at least 50 bullets, police sources said.

Jail for Silence

DETROIT (UPI) — The brother of a New Jersey suspect in the James R. Hoffa disappearance today refused to answer federal grand jury questions and a judge ordered him to jail until he agrees to talk. Stephen Andretta was asked only one question: "Where were you on July 30, 1975?"

New Spanish Gov't

MADRID (UPI) — Prime Minister Carlos Arias Navarro today formed the first government of the post-Franco era, giving key posts to politicians committed to political reform.

Bennett Finale Pre-Empts 'Race with the Devil'

Social Credit leader Bill Bennett pre-empted an adventure movie in Kelowna Wednesday night to make his last speech before the election today.

The movie at the Paramount Theatre was to have been, Race with the Devil, but the crowd of about 800 Social Credit supporters got a Bill Bennett feature instead; a province-wide re-run whose star last appeared here Nov. 12 when he was nominated to seek re-election in Okanagan South.

Meanwhile in Oak Bay Progressive Conservative leader Dr. Scott Wallace, eschewed the political forum in favor of his role as a father.

After a quiet dinner at home with his family he went with his family to Oak Bay High School to listen to his 14-year-old daughter, Julie, playing in a band concert.

"All the youngsters have spent the last few weeks working for me, delivering election brochures and the like," said Wallace. "I'm returning the compliment."

In Victoria, voters were lined up outside the doors of most polling stations even before the 8 a.m. opening today.

Returning officers issued last-minute cautions that voting must be done with an X made entirely within the space indicated and with the pencil provided in the voting booth.

The heaviest turnout was expected during the final hours before the 8 p.m. closing.

Information on where to vote and transportation to the polls may be obtained by phoning party headquarters in each constituency. These phone numbers are listed in newspaper advertisements or may be obtained by dialing 113 and asking for the party headquarters phone number in that constituency.

Information may also be obtained by phoning or going down to the returning office for the constituency. The returning office phones however will be given busy signals for most of the day because of the expected rush for information.

The addresses and phone numbers of the returning offices are:

Victoria — 1119 Vancouver St., 388-9443 or 388-9261.

Oak Bay — 1958 Fort St., 595-3442 or 595-3841.

Esquimalt — Farmers Market Shopping Centre near Six Mile House, 478-0613 or 478-0622.

Saanich-The Islands — 1020 McKenzie Avenue, 479-2715.

All liquor stores are closed in British Columbia for the full day. Hotels and restaurants may begin serving alcoholic beverages at 8 p.m.

Interest Cancellation Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Department stores and most banks are rejecting suggestions by Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young that they cancel interest charges incurred by the public during the recent mail strike.

The minister has urged that interest not be charged on credit purchases for which customers did not receive monthly statements.

She said Tuesday that the Toronto Dominion Bank and major oil companies have adopted this policy and urged others to do the same.

Representatives of other banks said they made special arrangements for Chargex and Mastercharge payments during the strike and it would be extremely costly to allow a blanket cancellation.

Belfast Stores Shattered In Powerful Bomb Blast

BELFAST (UPI) — A powerful bomb exploded on Belfast's main thoroughfare this afternoon, blowing out storefronts along a full block in a city centre area crowded with Christmas shoppers.

First reports said a warning had been given in time for the street to be cleared and there were no casualties.

The large bomb went off in Royal Avenue opposite the main British army headquarters in the city, a building guarded with pillboxes and protected by antirocket screens. The building had been a bomb target twice before.

Meanwhile in London Irish Republican Army gunmen holded up in a downtown apartment broke their 36-hour silence today and resumed talks with police. But they refused to discuss the condition of their two hostages.

Police commander James Nevill went to the front door of the house where the hostages are being held and, speaking through a bullhorn, asked if the gunmen wanted a new portable toilet.

"Yes" came a shouted reply. A rope was lowered from a third floor window to retrieve the toilet.

The conversation was the first communication with the gunmen since Tuesday night.

Nevill asked "what is the state of the hostages this morning?" There was no reply. He repeated the question, but the gunmen would not answer.

There was also no reply when he asked if they would accept a hot-line telephone link as they had Tuesday night.

STRAIT QUAKE

An earthquake measuring 3.5 intensity was recorded today in Georgia Strait at nearly the same place as a stonger disturbance Nov. 30.

Dr. William Milne, of the department of energy, mines and resources siesmology section, said the latest tremor at 7:03 a.m. is part of a series of small earthquakes recorded in the strait recently.

He said there were two small ones Wednesday, also near the centre of the body of water, almost in a line between Pt. Grey and Nanaimo.

B.C. Leading in Abortion Rate Jump

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of therapeutic abortions performed in Canada in 1974 was up 11.4 per cent from the previous year's total, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

By province, British Columbia had the highest 1974 rate at 29.2 and Newfoundland had the lowest at 1.5 abortions per 100 live births.

The increase is based on a total of 48,136 legal abortions reported performed in Canadian hospitals during 1974, up from 43,201 in 1973.

This produced a rate of 14 abortions per 100 live births, up from a rate of 12.6 in 1973.

However, the agency said that incomplete statistics showed that an additional 4,299 women resident in Canada had legal abortions in the United States during 1974.

This produced an over-all 1974 total of 52,425 therapeutic abortions, or a rate of about 15.3 per 100 live births in Canada. The over-all figures were not compared with previous years.

The 1974 Canadian abortion rate of 14 per 100 live births compared to 1973 rates of 19.5 in the U.S. and 17 in England and Wales. The rate also was compared with 15 other countries, which had rates ranging from a high of 102.3 in Hungary in 1973 to a low of 2.2 in Tunisia in 1973.

The abortion rate in the other areas: Ontario, 20; Alberta and the Yukon, 15; Manitoba, 8.3; Nova Scotia, 8; Saskatchewan, 7.9; Northwest Territories, 6.2; Quebec, 5.3; New Brunswick, 3.8; Prince Edward Island, 2.6.

The agency released additional information on 41,227 of the women who had abortions in Canada, or about 85 per cent of the total.

—58 per cent were single, 31 per cent were married and the remaining 11 per cent were separated, divorced, widowed or unmarried, but living as though married.

—31 per cent were under 20 years of age, 58 per cent were aged between 20 and 34 and the remaining 11 per cent were 35 or older.

—57 per cent had not previously had a delivery, 14 per cent had previously had one or two deliveries and the remaining 15 per cent had previously had three or more deliveries.

The 1974 Canadian abortion rate was based on the 1973 total of live births because birth figures were not available for 1974.

Sea Boundary Set . . . 23 Years Later

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

After 23 years, the city of Victoria is finally going to notify the citizenry where the city's seaward boundaries lie.

City council today authorized city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to rectify a minor oversight which, since 1952, has left the ocean limits of Victoria in a sort of vague unspecified limbo.

De Villiers explained to the Times that the omission came to light recently when he was overhauling some ancient statutes and searching for a precise definition of the city's limits.

He said the boundaries were first established when the city was incorporated by an act of the colonial legislature in 1862. But at that time they included the word "shoreline," for which no legal definition exists in either English or Canadian law.

A further provincial act of 1936 gave municipalities the power to extend their boundaries seaward, but it was not until 1948 that Victoria decided to take up the offer.

In that year the city passed a bylaw extending the limits "to include the adjoining foreshore and any area below low water mark which is deemed necessary or desirable."

So far so good. But for the bylaw to become effective three things had to happen:

It had to be published in a local newspaper, the approval of the lieutenant-governor had to be obtained, and notification of that approval had to be published in the official Gazette.

Steps 1 and 2 were followed, even if it took four years for the lieutenant-governor's approval to come through in 1952, but then things started to come unstuck.

De Villiers said the records of the municipal affairs department indicate the order-in-council was duly forwarded to City Hall in May of that year. But there is no record that it was ever received by the city.

(No spokesman was immediately available to say whether a postal strike was in progress at the time).

But now all the proper formalities will be observed. And if any of us have innocently overstepped the limits in the past 23 years, perhaps we should ask those concerned to forgive us our trespasses.

Life Without a Steak? —The Vegetarian View

(Columnist Scott has been told by his doctor to take things easy for a couple of weeks and to give up his column temporarily. So, while he is away the Times will reprint some of the columns from past years which readers enjoyed.)

It seemed a moderately witty notion, in view of the current alarms over the high cost of meat, to look into the possibilities of becoming a vegetarian and I wish someone would break both my arms when I get these ideas.

I had enlisted the help of the two couples I know who eat no meat, as a dietary way of life, warning them that my interest was mainly if not entirely journalistic, and before you could say "Medium rare" my desk was groaning under the weight of periodicals, tracts, studies, surveys and books that may just possibly be the most persuasive of any ever printed.

I should say right here at the beginning that the very idea of Bean Burgers, Peanut-Sesame Loaf Supreme, Nutty Noodle Casserole, Vegetarian Enchiladas, Savory Onion Quiche and Crunchy Granola causes my taste buds actual physical pain, but the arguments for vegetarianism are so downright compelling that it may be weeks before I can bite into a small steak without feeling guilt. It may be weeks before I can afford one, too, but that's beside the point.

If there is a degree of fanaticism in the vegetarian's arguments or a tendency to become evangelical it is only because both of the principal reasons for embracing it make a lot of sense.

With some, you see, it began with a revulsion over the killing of innocent beasts for human consumption ("this gnawing and slobbering over animal flesh," as one puts it), but there are many more who, less emotionally, have given up flesh to search consciously for a diet pattern that will offer something more sensible than our present food consumption ("the malnutrition of gluttony" as another describes the way we eat).

It's not an easy way to go, in either case, as an alternative. You do not simply pop some nuts into your mouth or spoon in some yogurt. It requires an encyclopedic knowledge of nutrients and some imaginative improvising to provide a menu that won't be dull.

Both the wives I've consulted agree that shopping and the preparation of meals are more time-consuming and demanding than they are for the woman who simply obeys her whims in the supermarket. That probably explains why there's a wide variety of literature on the subject, one book, "Diet For A Small Planet" by Frances Moore Lappe, being required reading.

The aim is to find that magic formula of proteins, the building bricks of body tissues, that will check the more or less constant process of breaking down and wearing out that, it seems, happens to your poor old body and mine.

The vegetarians say — and demonstrate only too well — that we over-indulge in carbohydrates and refined sugars, that we're "starch-eaters and the sugar-babies" existing on a diet that makes fat and flab, weak hearts and under-sized muscles. One of the meaner spokesmen of the breed has described the way we eat as similar to running a Rolls-Royce on paraffin.

The soya bean, the peanut, the sunflower seed and yeast aren't simply substitutes for protein meat, but are richer in protein content, pound for pound, than anything you'll find at your friendly neighborhood butcher's.

Harcourt Roy, the most articulate guru of the non-meat-eaters, put it all very succinctly and with that characteristic enthusiasm that I have found almost irresistible: "Your long-term aim is to reduce the starches and sugars, increase the proteins, plus, of course, the vitamin-rich fruits, vegetables and salads. Your body will love you for it. In fact, you'll feel so frisky that you will have to check your birth certificate to find out if you really are the same person. You could become a menace."

With many, of course, it goes deeper than that. They see the day when the continued use of the cow, calf, steer, pig and chicken will simply be so uneconomical that they'll be obsolete. Canada Packers can't say they haven't been warned.

Edward T. Banks, another immensely persuasive writer on the subject, says, "The world will not be able to sustain life, at the present rate of population expansion, by means of the wasteful method of providing something like eight tons of vegetable food for an animal in order to produce one ton of chemicalized meat."

It's a point that's a kind of catechism with vegetarians — they'll tell you, for example, that the world acreage of food production lands could be doubled if we relied on growing rather than grazing—but down deep they've a realistic pessimism.

The fact they recognize is that most of us are disinterested in diet for purely nutritional reasons, that we've a kind of sensual pleasure in eating, dictated by habit and custom, that we're push-overs for the taste manipulators, slaves to a sizzling steak, whatever the cost, and I am very much afraid that they are right.

Readers who want to pass on messages to Scott, suggest ideas for future columns, to tell him they love him or hate him, should address mail to: Rainbow Rd., R.R. 1, Ganges, B.C.

Youth Burned By Gas

Fourteen-year-old Richard Menno Pruim of 391 Conway learned the hard way Wednesday night that a person shouldn't light a match while handling gasoline.

And today the youth's in Victoria General Hospital burn unit with second degree burns to his stomach and thighs. Hospital officials say he's in good condition.

According to Saanich fire chief Harold Gain the youth was attempting to siphon some gas from a tractor shortly before 10 p.m. to get a fire going in the firepalce of his parent's home.

In doing so he spilled some gas on himself. He lit a match to see what he was doing. The gasoline burst into flames, igniting his clothing and setting fire to the tractor.

Gain said the youth threw himself on the ground and extinguished the fire in his clothing by rolling in the mud. He then ran towards the house 100 yards away calling out to his brother William, 17, inside watching TV, that the tractor was on fire.

The boys grabbed some buckets, got water from a nearby creek and put out the fire in the tractor before firemen reached the scene.

The parents of the two boys left Victora 10 days ago for a month-long visit in Holland.

Gain said the John-Deere tractor was heavily damaged.

Morning Pace Hectic As Voters Rush Polls

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Voting ranged from heavy to very heavy during the first three hours of today's provincial election as a high percentage of the 150,891 local voters were expected to go to the polls in the Greater Victoria area.

"The voting is heavy everywhere," said W. H. Davis, assistant returning officer for the Victoria riding.

The line-ups at some polls were surprisingly large even before voting started at 8 a.m., he said.

The biggest rush was expected in the final hours before polls close at 8 p.m.

"There have been a number of complaints but a smaller number than could be expected. The voting is going quite smoothly considering the heavy turnout."

The complaints concerned political signs near polling stations.

By law, no political sign may be visible in the area of a polling station. The signs were mainly on lawns. Offending political parties promised to remove them immediately.

A large number of people discovered they were not on the voters list but this is not unusual in any election, Davis said.

If they were eligible to vote in some other riding, they could cast a ballot. It would be sealed and sent to te hriding for counting.

At the office of the district registar of voters, the phone rang constantly as people wanted to know where to vote.

"People always seem to leave it to the very last minute," said Mrs. D. M. Ambrose, senior election clerk for the greater Victoria area.

"Some of them are about to get into their car when they suddenly realize they don't know where they're going. It's just human nature I guess to leave things to the last minute."

John Smallwood, the district registrar of voters, spent the early hours going from poll to poll, making sure there were enough ballots and affidavits for those casting absentee votes.

People who believe they are eligible to vote can sign an affidavit and vote. The ballot will be held until eligibility is checked. If the voter is eligible, the ballot will be counted.

Polling stations close promptly at 8 p.m. but votes can be cast after that time by those inside the polling station.

"Anyone inside the station at 8 p.m. will be eligible to vote," Mrs. Ambrose said.

"However, if they are outside at 8 p.m. they will be too late."

(Information on where to vote is in the election roundup story on Page 1.)

The first election results will be broadcast on all B.C. radio and TV outlets shortly after 8 p.m.

STUDY IN STUDS caught by Times photographer John McKay only goes to show that even construction sites have a certain beauty. Elderly pedestrian plods along a two-by-four tunnel which provides a cathedral-like perspective to the Government Street sidewalk alongside the Harbor Square development.

TOO MUCH UNION, DIRECTOR QUITS

George Duck, the city of Victoria's representative on the Gorge Road Hospital board for several years, has resigned because he says he's fed up with the emphasis on union matters in board discussions.

In his letter of resignation submitted to today's city council meeting, Duck says: "In past years we were always concerned with pateint care and the improvement of our buildings and grounds for the benefit of both patients and the community.

"Now we spend most of our time deliberating on union and staff problems, especially their demands for money."

Duck says he will not be a party to "this continual taking from the public purse on an annual basis, with no increase in responsibility or performance."

Seven Honorary Citizens

Contributions to the social and cultural life of the community were recognized today when seven persons received honorary citizenship certificates from Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

The presentations at this afternoon's regular council meeting, one of Pollen's last civic duties before he vacates the mayor's chair, were made to:

Victoria Times columnist Elizabeth Forbes, who has written a regular column for the newspaper since 1964, when she retired after more than 20 years as women's editor;

Donald Gray, in recognition of his many years' work organizing Silver Threads variety concerts;

Mrs. Madge Hamilton, former assistant provincial archivist and authority on the city's heritage buildings.

William Ireland, former provincial archivist and provincial librarian;

Internationally-known wildlife artist Fenwick Lansdowne, whose paintings of birds are displayed in some of the great museums of the world;

Mrs. Annie McVie, for her service to senior citizens;

Mrs. Winifred Scott Wood, distinguished pianist and vice-principal of the Conservatory of Music.

Chancellor Voting Starts Next Week

Ballots will be sent out next week to 7,000 University of Victoria graduates, faculty and elected officials for election of a UVic chancellor.

The mail strike delayed the vote, but UVic registrar Ron Ferry said today ballots will be sent out as soon as the mail backlog clears next week. Deadline for vote returns is Jan. 9.

The term of incumbent Robert Wallace will continue until that time.

Wallace, 69, has been associated with UVic and Victoria College for 47 years.

His challenger, Dr. Robert Wright, 68, of Vancouver, was head of the B.C. Research Council for 26 years, prior to his retirement in 1972.

Star Status Cuts No Ice in Show Biz

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

When an amateur competition skater thinks about turning professional she has dreams of a star's life — sleeping late, being her own boss.

Gone will be the days of rigorous work and discipline.

But it's not in the least like that, says Canadian world champion and Ice Capades star Karen Magnussen.

Now within a few months of concluding her first contract with Ice Capades, Karen says after turning pro you become more obligated in more than ever before.

You get less sleep, have to be super-careful of the amount you eat, and have almost no time to yourself.

"I do almost twice as much skating as anyone else in the company" she says. "I alternate among the three companies that are on the road and often have to learn numbers in a very short space of time."

In 75 days Karen has had seven days off and those were not consecutive.

She skates every day she's not traveling — three times on Saturdays, twice on Sundays. "You never get to sleep much before 2 a.m. and are certainly not expected to get sick."

After the competition environment where she was a rare and in a sense, pampered being, the professional life turned her into an automaton, a sort of property, Karen says.

"Line skaters and principals alike, we're all weighed in every Saturday," she says. "Two pounds grace are allowed but if a skater gains more, two pounds must be lost by the next Saturday or a $10 fine is levied.

"That's particularly hard on the line skaters because their pay is small and they have to foot the bills for their own accommodation and meals. It also means the kids tend to stuff themselves at the beginning of the week and starve the rest of the time."

KAREN . . . only seven days off

Still Karen accepts the life cheerfully and matter-of-factly. There is a thoroughly common-sense side to the 23-year-old champion's warm and natural personality.

"I only have a certain number of precious years," she says. "It's necessary that I make the most of them.

"I want more than anything to stay Canadian but it's discouraging to find how little interest there is in sustaining Canadian talent at home."

She and her manager, she explains, have the concept of a Canadian television special on skating, but while potential sponsors express enthusiasm for the idea, that's as far as it goes. No good reasons are given for not taking it up.

"The disinterest is general," she says, "and every year we lose so many of our best performers to the United States."

Spending more than 10 months of the year on tour is a good deal more than Karen would do if she had her way. She would like to tour about 20 weeks — and Canadian cities only, except for a possible two or three Pacific Coast U.S. cities.

In the American mid-west and southern centres, she finds baseball and football take all the limelight.

"You work your heart out in arenas half filled with people who have small understanding of the skater's art."

What's in the cards when she gives up touring? Well so far she plans to teach and coach, ski a lot and maybe open a sporting goods store because of her practical interest in equipment.

She has already influenced a skating boot design which CCM is bringing out under her name.

Travel and time factors virtually rule out hobbies but she is a collector. And her specialty? Skating memorabilia: old skates, blades, books about skating or any historic item on the subject.

Her biggest wish at the moment is for more free time to spend in the seaview home she has bought at Sechelt and to fulfil offers to commentate at competitions and accept other international invitations.

And she would like to be at home in Vancouver with her family for their traditional Scandinavian Christmas Eve gathering. But that's not possible because Ice Capades always performs somewhere on Christmas Day and this year she must be in Spokane by Dec. 24.

'NONSENSICAL' CHANGES AT CENTRE UNDER FIRE

Langford regional director Earl Pallister said Wednesday that "nonsensical" construction changes at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre are costing taxpayers thousands of dollars.

His comment came as the Capital Regional Board debated a $168.65 bill for extra work at the new $1,000,000 curling rink.

Directors were told bill was for revising a rear fire exit. While the fire marshal in Vancouver had approved a width of 5 feet 3 inches, the local assistant fire marshal had insisted on a width of 6 feet.

The debate came to an abrupt halt when the board was told the work had already been done. Payment was approved.

But Ron Dumont, retiring director from Sooke, said the issue should not be allowd to die because there was an estimated $28,000 in additonal costs from such changes at the $630,000 Sooke arena now under construction.

BROOME HILL

A lovely name for a beautiful subdivision where new homes are springing up. The low lot prices have allowed our builders to sell $10,000 below any competitor. You can buy a new car and unlimited gasoline for the real savings on low down payment, less mortgage ($100 per month at least) and low taxes. Start building an equity in real property now, beat inflation and live happily. In two years or so you may want to trade for something closer to town but you probably won't because Sooke is beautiful and I love it enough to live there myself. Three homes to choose from at $48,900.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Trudeau government was trapped today between the danger of a renewed postal strike and the need to break its own anti-inflation guidelines.

The crunch came Wednesday when the Anti-Inflation Board rejected the settlement that ended a six week strike by the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

The settlement, which provided for a 38 per cent pay increase over 30 months, was well in excess of the government's eight per cent a year guide but in line with a contract obtained by mail carriers a few months ago.

The cabinet will meet tonight in an unusual session to decide whether to over-rule the board.

After a four-hour cabinet meeting today, Prime Minister Trudeau told reporters that "they (the board) are going to send us a reasoned desicion this afternoon. Sometime tonight we will have to give them a reasonable answer."

If cabinet over-rules the Anti-Inflation Board, much of the board's credibility would be shattered and other groups would certainly attempt to exceed the pay guidelines.

On the other hand, attempts to renew contract negotiations would almost certainly lead to another CUPW walkout.

The union can still strike legally until the agreement is signed.

The Anti-Inflation Board Wednesday made no formal announcement that it had rejected the agreement between the Post Office and CUPW.

However, it became generally known that the board had turned thumbs down.

Prime Minister Trudeau said the board had contacted several cabinet ministers and, he understood, the union—to

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's 2,200 air traffic controllers are seeking a 20 per cent wage increase in a one-year contract, Bill Robertson, vice-president of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association, said Wednesday.

The present contract expires at the end of this month and controllers have not yet sought the services of a conciliation board.

Gov't Lifts Ceilings On Subsidized Homes

Times News Services

OTTAWA — New price ceilings for houses under the government's subsidized home ownership plan were announced today by Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson.

The new maximum in Victoria is $45,000, up $3,000 from $42,000.

In Vancouver and Toronto, it has been raised to $47,000 from $43,000.

Danson released to the Commons welfare committee the new price limits which amount to an increase of as much as 10 per cent in some areas.

An aide to Danson said the limits were kept within federal anti-inflation guides.

In some places, there is no increase in the ceilings under the assisted home ownership program.

Houses above the price ceilings cannot qualify under AHOP and buyers cannot get interest-reducing payments from the federal government.

Builders have complained that the limits were too low in high-cost housing areas like Toronto and Vancouver.

Few buyers could take advantage of AHOP in these places.

Price limits in other metropolitan areas with current maximums in brackets: Calgary, $36,000 ($33,000); Edmonton, $36,000, ($33,000; Halifax, $38,500 ($36,000; Hamilton $43,000 ($41,000).

Montreal $31,500 ($29,000); Ottawa-Hull, $38,000, ($35,000); Regina, $35,000 ($34,000).

Winnipeg, $35,600, ($33,000); Cranbrook, $33,000 ($32,000); Kelowan, $34,000 ($32,000).

Prince George, $39,000 ($37,000); Red Deer, Alta., $30,500 ($28,000); Yellowknife, N.W.T., $43,500, ($39,500; and the Yukon Territory, $41,000 ($39,000).

The federal anti-inflation progam permits price increases only to cover higher production costs.

IT ISN'T LEAKS from City Hall that worry Toronto aldermen. It's leaks at City Hall. Councillors Reid Scott and David Smith share a brolly while near-by bucket catches drips from the leaking roof at $31 million structure. About $62,000 has been spent to fix the roof but the rain keeps coming through.

2 ICBC MEN CHARGED IN FRAUD CASE

VANCOUVER (CP) — An adjuster and an estimator with the Insurance Corporation of B.C. (ICBC) along with the office manager of a Richmond body shop are to appear in Vancouver provincial court Jan. 12, charged with conspiring to defraud ICBC.

Stuart Trober, 30, an ICBC adjuster; David Sharma, 30, an estimator; Stanley Kadlex, 25, office manager of Tri Starr Collision Repairs Ltd. of 375 No. 3 Road, Richmond, and the body shop itself are charged.

The charge says they conspired to defraud ICBC of money by submitting "doucments which did not accurately reflect the amount of work performed, parts supplied and/or costs incurred" in repairing certain cars between Feb. 1 and May 30 this year.

In addition, Trober and Sharma face a second count of conspiring with John Carson, 24, and Michael Davis, 19, to defraud ICBC of $959 by submitting false insurance claims.

Trober also faces another count of conspiring with Spencer Rea, 29, Peter Humphrys, 31, Davis and Carson to defraud ICBC of $2,132 by submitting false insurance claims.

Price Index Still Jumping

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The cost of living continued to rise steeply in November, mainly because of higher prices for shelter, transportation and food, Statistics Canada reported today.

The consumer price index rose nine-tenths of one per cent in November, the same as the jump recorded in October. There had been a one-month respite in September, when the index rose only two-tenths of one per cent, following a chain of successive sharp monthly rises during the summer.

The November figures come as the anti-inflation board is rushing to develop its price monitoring system and is under continuing criticism from union leaders and others that it won't be effective in controlling prices. The board has already turned down several proposed wage increases, including the postal workers' contract, because they exceeded rises allowed by the anti-inflation program.

The November increase set an annual inflation rate of 10.4 per cent.

Statistics Canada said increased shelter costs for both owned and rented accommodation accounted for much of the 1.0 per cent rise in the non-food price index. Shelter costs rose 0.1 per cent in the month.

The 1.9 per cent rise in the transportation component largely reflected higher new car prices which were up 3.4 per cent over the year-end 1975 model prices.

Increased housing and transportation costs accounted for two-thirds of the total increase in the consumer price index.

The price changes pushed the value of a 1971 dollar down to only 69 cents.

Food prices increased 0.6 per cent during the month, as did cost of clothing. Health and personal care costs climbed 1.0 per cent while the indices for recreation, education and reading and also those of tobacco and alcohol products each edged up 0.2 per cent.

Partially responsible for the small increase in food prices was the decline in cost of sugar, which was 47 per cent cheaper than a year ago.

'Baby, Just Wait'

"Crowded right now? Baby just you wait."

That's the well-aimed family planning message in Indonesia, the Unitarian Service Committee's newest field of co-operation with an overwhelming population of 180,000,00.

Indonesia has an average density of 1,660 persons for every square mile. Health care, education and family planning have been chosen as the joint USC-government goals.

Despite government pledges to erect 10,000 three-room schools before January 1976, more than three million children will go without schooling.

At the Aria Putra Children's home, targets are to provide primary health care in Klomkok, Central Java; to provide a three-year subsidy for health services until the home's membership grows and to grant assistance in community development.

The USC has also been asked to sponsor a vocational training program to construct a two-storey building containing four rooms to be attached to the Muhammadiyah Vocational Training Centre established in 1912. Since its inception the centre has already created 7,000 schools.

A survey conducted earlier this year by USC executive director Lotta Hitschmanova, and special adviser Dr. Gordon Merrill, found that although family planning is a basic policy of the government the density of population has prompted the goal of reducing the current 2.8 per cent annual growth rate to 2 per cent, hopefully by the year 2,000.

The government is asking for assistance from abroad and there is a national family planning co-ordinating board working in the country.

Large billboards in Jakarta promote family planning and the Indonesian coin in greatest use carries a symbol of family planning. In that country, too, women hold key positions in and outside the government and take their women's rights for granted, says Dr. Hitschmanova.

Another sign in use in Indonesia clarifies further the family planning message: "The population bomb is everybody's baby."

Donations can be made at any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, mailed to the Victoria Times, Box 300, Victoria, or brought to the office at 2621 Douglas.

RCMP Guard for Barrett Follows Coquitlam Threats

Premier Dave Barrett was accompanied today by two plainclothes RCMP officers after he received several threats during the final days of the campaign leading to today's provincial election.

Barrett was not available for comment and members of his party had no comment.

Meanwhile, Tom Osborne, the Liberal candidate for Coquitlam riding, said he was told over the telephone he would "pay" if the number of votes cast for him is enough to stop Social Credit's George Kerster from winning the seat from Barrett.

"The man said if my vote should be a factor in Kerster not winning, I would pay and pay for the rest of my life," said Osborne.

Social Credit leader Bill Bennett pre-empted an adventure movie in Kelowna Wednesday night to make his last speech before the election today.

The movie at the Paramount Theatre was to have been, Race with the Devil, but the crowd of about 800 Social Credit supporters got a Bill Bennett feature instead; a province-wide re-run whose star last appeared here Nov. 12 when he was nominated to seek re-election in Okanagan South.

Meanwhile in Oak Bay Progressive Conservative leader Dr. Scott Wallace, eschewed the political forum in favor of his role as a father.

After a quiet dinner at home with his family he went with his family to Oak Bay High School to listen to his 14-year-old daughter, Julie, playing in a band concert.

In Victoria, voters were lined up outside the doors of most polling stations even before the 8 a.m. opening today.

Returning officers issued last-minute cautions that voting must be done with an X made entirely within the space indicated and with the pencil provided in the voting booth.

The heaviest turnout was expected during the final hours before the 8 p.m. closing.

Information on where to vote and transportation to the polls may be obtained by phoning party headquarters in each constituency. These phone numbers are listed in newspaper advertisements or may be obtained by dialing 113 and asking for the party headquarters phone number in that constituency.

Information may also be obtained by phoning or going down to the returning office for the constituency. The returning office phones however will be given busy signals for most of the day because of the expected rush for information.

All liquor stores are closed in British Columbia for the full day. Hotels and restaurants may begin serving alcoholic beverages at 8 p.m.

Interest Cancellation Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — Department stores and most banks are rejecting suggestions by Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young that they cancel interest charges incurred by the public during the recent mail strike.

The minister has urged that interest not be charged on credit purchases for which customers did not receive monthly statements.

She said Tuesday that the Toronto Dominion Bank and major oil companies have adopted this policy and urged others to do the same.

Representatives of other banks said they made special arrangements for Chargex and Mastercharge payments during the strike and it would be extremely costly to allow a blanket cancellation.

STRAIT QUAKE

An earthquake measuring 3.5 intensity was recorded today in Georgia Strait at nearly the same place as a stonger disturbance Nov. 30.

Dr. William Milne, of the department of energy, mines and resources seismology section, said the latest tremor at 7:03 a.m. is part of a series of small earthquakes recorded in the strait recently.

He said there were two small ones Wednesday, also near the centre of the body of water, almost in a line between Pt. Grey and Nanaimo.

Belfast Stores Shattered In Powerful Bomb Blast

BELFAST (UPI) — A powerful bomb exploded on Belfast's main thoroughfare this afternoon, blowing out storefronts along a full block in a city centre area crowded with Christmas shoppers.

First reports said a warning had been given in time for the street to be cleared and there were no casualties.

The large bomb went off in Royal Avenue opposite the main British army headquarters in the city, a building guarded with pillboxes and protected by antirocket screens. The building had been a bomb target twice before.

Meanwhile in London Irish Republican Army gunmen holded up in a downtown apartment broke their 36-hour silence today and resumed talks with police. But they refused to discuss the condition of their two hostages.

Police commander James Nevill went to the front door of the house where the hostages are being held and, speaking through a bullhorn, asked if the gunmen wanted a new portable toilet.

"Yes" came a shouted reply. A rope was lowered from a third floor window to retrieve the toilet.

The conversation was the first communication with the gunmen since Tuesday night.

Nevill asked "what is the state of the hostages this morning?" There was no reply. He repeated the question, but the gunmen would not answer.

There was also no reply when he asked if they would accept a hot-line telephone link as they had Tuesday night.

B.C. Leading Abortion Rate Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of therapeutic abortions performed in Canada in 1974 was up 11.4 per cent from the previous year's total, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

By province, British Columbia had the highest 1974 rate at 29.2 and Newfoundland had the lowest at 1.5 abortions per 100 live births.

The increase is based on a total of 48,136 legal abortions reported performed in Canadian hospitals during 1974, up from 43,201 in 1973.

This produced a rate of 14 abortions per 100 live births, up from a rate of 12.6 in 1973.

However, the agency said that incomplete statistics showed that an additional 4,299 women resident in Canada had legal abortions in the United States during 1974.

This produced an over-all 1974 total of 52,425 therapeutic abortions, or a rate of about 15.3 per 100 live births in Canada. The over-all figures were not compared with previous years.

The 1974 Canadian abortion rate of 14 per 100 live births compared to 1973 rates of 19.5 in the U.S. and 17 in England and Wales. The rate also was compared with 15 other countries, which had rates ranging from a high of 102.3 in Hungary in 1973 to a low of 2.2 in Tunisia in 1973.

The abortion rate in the other areas: Ontario, 20; Alberta and the Yukon, 15; Manitoba, 8.3; Nova Scotia, 8; Saskatchewan, 7.9; Northwest Territories, 6.2; Quebec, 5.3; New Brunswick, 3.8; Prince Edward Island, 2.6.

The agency released additional information on 41,227 of the women who had abortions in Canada, or about 85 per cent of the total.

—58 per cent were single, 31 per cent were married and the remaining 11 per cent were separated, divorced, widowed or unmarried, but living as though married.

—31 per cent were under 20 years of age, 58 per cent were aged between 20 and 34 and the remaining 11 per cent were 35 or older.

—57 per cent had not previously had a delivery, 14 per cent had previously had one or two deliveries and the remaining 15 per cent had previously had three or more deliveries.

The 1974 Canadian abortion rate was based on the 1973 total of live births because birth figures were not available for 1974.

Oil Shares Up At Toronto

Oil shares continued to climb in light mid-afternoon trading at Toronto Thursday. Other prices remained mixed. The industrial index lost .22 to 171.23 and base metals .21 to 71.27. Golds rose 4.27 to 243.39 and western oils 1.25 to 197.73.

Trading by 2 p.m. slackened to 1.07 million shares from 1.75 million at the same time Wednesday. Advances held a slight lead over declines, 158 to 152, with 226 issues unchanged. Hudson Bay Mining A tumbled 1¼ to $15½ after the company announced that it cut its quarterly dividend payment to 20 cents from 40 cents.

Bell Canada fell 1 to $42½, Reichhold Chemicals 1 to $16¼, Falconbridge Nickel ¾ to $27½, Walker-Gooderham A ½ to $28 and Bow Valley Industries ½ to $14⅞.

Moore Corp. gained 1 to $47½, Husky Oil ¾ to $17¾, Simpsons-Sears ⅝ to $9⅝, Gulf Oil Canada ⅝ to $28¼ and Pacific Pete ½ to $26¾.

McIntyre lost ½ to $36½ and Falconbridge Copper ¼ to $6. Dome Mines rose ⅝ to $33⅝, Denison ½ to $56 and Rio Algom ½ to $29.

Sunningdale was off ¼ to $6 and Ranger ¼ to $12⅛. Chieftain Development was up ⅛ to $8¼.

New York

The stock market extended Wednesday's technical rally with a modest advance Thursday in fairly active trading.

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.34 at 835.33 and gainers held a 7-to-6 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange.

Brokers noted some carryover of the technical upswing that lifted the Dow Jones industrial average nearly 10 points Wednesday.

But they said it appeared the market was still held back by uncertainty over whether Congress and president Ford could agree on legislation to continue this year's tax cuts into 1976.

Texaco was the NYSE volume leader, down ¼ at $23 in trading marked by a series of medium-sized blocks.

U.S. Steel rose ¾ to $63¾ on top of a 15½ point gain Wednesday, when the company said its January orders had picked up substantially.

Fluor Corp. rose ⅞ to $34¼ on sharply higher quarterly earnings.

UAL slipped ⅝ to $25. The company's United Air Lines subsidairy cancelled its scheduled flights through Dec. 24 after talks with striking mechanics broke off Wednesday.

Sambo's Restaurants led the active list on the American Stock Exchange, down ⅝ at $14⅛.

The NYSE's composite index was up .06 at 46.46.

The Amex market-value index added .24 to 81.82.

London

Prices on the London stock market were fractionally lower in light trading Thursday.

The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed today at 358.1 down 4.8.

Oil and bank shares recorded some of the largest losses while gold stocks advanced.

Canadian issues edged lower in quiet trading.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices on most commodities closed generally mixed in light activity Thursday on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Oilseeds rebounded from recent losses to post gains as much as three cents higher, although flax was down as much as 15 cents a bushel. Most other commodities fluctuated only slightly in either direction.

Wednesday's volume of trade was 46,000 bushels of feed wheat, 491,000 of oats 1,318,000 of barley, 168,000 of rye, 63,000 of flax, 473,000 of rapeseed and nil of corn.

CHICAGO (AP) — Farm commodity futures traded in a fairly narrow range through most of the session on the Board of Trade Thursday, then closed with most pits a little higher.

The best performance after a session of questionable interest was posted in soybean futures which advanced 3½ cents a bushel. Wheat futures were mixed, corn and oats gained up to ¾ cent. Meal and oil prices were mixed. Iced broilers gained up to ¾ cent a pound after a session of very slow trade.

Gold futures on domestic markets closed steady to about $1.50 an ounce higher, but trade also was slow. It appeared that gold trade gained some strength from an improved silver futures market, where prices rose about 5 to 6 cents an ounce.

Grain futures lacked outside Soybeans, oil and meal attracted buyers on the opening but the end-products then weakened and moved independently lower into the close. Some late commercial buying and short covering lifted soybean prices.

Similarly a small late demand and short covering produced small gains in corn and oats. Trade was very slow, however.

At the close, soybeans were 1 to 3½ cents a bushel higher Jan. 4.67; wheat ½ lower to 1½ higher Dec. 3.37½; corn unchanged to ¾ higher Dec. 2.60½ and oats unchanged to ¾ higher Dec. 1.60¼.

Sea Boundary Set ... 23 Years Later

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

After 23 years, the city of Victoria is finally going to notify the citizenry where the city's seaward boundaries lie.

City council today authorized city solicitor Jakob de Villiers to rectify a minor oversight which, since 1952, has left the ocean limits of Victoria in a sort of vague unspecified limbo.

De Villiers explained to the Times that the omission came to light recently when he was overhauling some ancient statutes and searching for a precise definition of the city's limits.

He said the boundaries were first established when the city was incorporated by an act of the colonial legislature in 1862. But at that time they included the word "shoreline," for which no legal definition exists in either English or Canadian law.

A further provincial act of 1936 gave municipalities the power to extend their boundaries seaward, but it was not until 1948 that Victoria decided to take up the offer.

In that year the city passed a bylaw extending the limits "to include the adjoining foreshore and any area below low water mark which is deemed necessary or desirable."

So far so good. But for the bylaw to become effective three things had to happen:

It had to be published in a local newspaper, the approval of the lieutenant-governor had to be obtained, and notification of that approval had to be published in the official Gazette.

Steps 1 and 2 were followed, even if it took four years for the lieutenant-governor's approval to come through in 1952, but then things started to come unstuck.

De Villiers said the records of the municipal affairs department indicate the order-in-council was duly forwarded to City Hall in May of that year. But there is no record that it was ever received by the city.

(No spokesman was immediately available to say whether a postal strike was in progress at the time).

But, now all the proper formalities will be observed. And if any of us have innocently overstepped the limits in the past 23 years, perhaps we should ask those concerned to forgive us our trespasses.

Youth Burned By Gas

Fourteen-year-old Richard Menno Pruim of 391 Conway learned the hard way Wednesday night that a person shouldn't light a match while handling gasoline.

And today the youth's in Victoria General Hospital burn unit with second degree burns to his stomach and thighs. Hospital officials say he's in good condition.

According to Saanich fire chief Harold Gain the youth was attempting to siphon some gas from a tractor shortly before 10 p.m. to get a fire going in the fireplace of his parents' home.

In doing so he spilled some gas on himself. He lit a match to see what he was doing. The gasoline burst into flames, igniting his clothing and setting fire to the tractor.

Gain said the youth threw himself on the ground and extinguished the fire in his clothing by rolling in the mud. He then ran towards the house 100 yards away calling out to his brother William, 17, inside watching TV, that the tractor was on fire.

The boys grabbed some buckets, got water from a nearby creek and put out the fire in the tractor before firemen reached the scene.

The parents of the two boys left Victora 10 days ago for a month-long visit in Holland.

Gain said the John-Deere tractor was heavily damaged.

Morning Pace Hectic As Voters Rush Polls

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Voting ranged from heavy to very heavy during the first three hours of today's provincial election as a high percentage of the 150,891 local voters were expected to go to the polls in the Greater Victoria area.

"The voting is heavy everywhere," said W. H. Davis, assistant returning officer for the Victoria riding.

The line-ups at some polls were surprisingly large even before voting started at 8 a.m., he said.

The biggest rush was expected in the final hours before polls close at 8 p.m.

"There have been a number of complaints but a smaller number than could be expected. The voting is going quite smoothly, considering the heavy turnout."

The complaints concerned political signs near polling stations.

By law, no political sign may be visible in the area of a polling station. The signs were mainly on lawns. Offending political parties promised to remove them immediately.

A large number of people discovered they were not on the voters list but this is not unusual in any election, Davis said.

If they were eligible to vote in some other riding, they could cast a ballot. It would be sealed and sent to the riding for counting.

At the office of the district registar of voters, the phone rang constantly as people wanted to know where to vote.

"People always seem to leave it to the very last minute," said Mrs. D. M. Ambrose, senior election clerk for the Greater Victoria area.

"Some of them are about to get into their car when they suddenly realize they don't know where they're going. It's just human nature I guess to leave things to the last minute."

John Smallwood, the district registrar of voters, spent the early hours going from poll to poll, making sure there were enough ballots and affidavits for those casting absentee votes.

People who believe they are eligible to vote can sign an affidavit and vote. The ballot will be held until eligibility is checked. If the voter is eligible, the ballot will be counted.

Polling stations close promptly at 8 p.m. but votes can be cast after that time by those inside the polling station.

"Anyone inside the station at 8 p.m. will be eligible to vote," Mrs. Ambrose said.

"However, if they are outside at 8 p.m. they will be too late."

(Information on where to vote is in the election roundup story on Page 1.)

The first election results will be broadcast on all B.C. radio and TV outlets shortly after 8 p.m.

Life Without a Steak? —The Vegetarian View

(Columnist Scott has been told by his doctor to take things easy for a couple of weeks and to give up his column temporarily. So, while he is away the Times will reprint some of the columns from past years which readers enjoyed.)

It seemed a moderately witty notion, in view of the current alarms over the high cost of meat, to look into the possibilities of becoming a vegetarian and I wish someone would break both my arms when I get these ideas.

I had enlisted the help of the two couples I know who eat no meat, as a dietary way of life, warning them that my interest was mainly if not entirely journalistic, and before you could say "medium rare" my desk was groaning under the weight of periodicals, tracts, studies, surveys and books that may just possibly be the most persuasive of any ever printed.

I should say right here at the beginning that the very idea of Bean Burgers, Peanut-Sesame Loaf Supreme, Nutty Noodle Casserole, Vegetarian Enchiladas, Savory Onion Quiche and Crunchy Granola causes my taste buds actual physical pain, but the arguments for vegetarianism are so downright compelling that it may be weeks before I can bite into a small steak without feeling guilt. It may be weeks before I can afford one, too, but that's beside the point.

If there is a degree of fanaticism in the vegetarian's arguments or a tendency to become evangelical it is only because both of the principal reasons for embracing it make a lot of sense.

With some, you see, it began with a revulsion over the killing of innocent beasts for human consumption ("this gnawing and slobbering over animal flesh," as one puts it), but there are many more who, less emotionally, have given up flesh to search consciously for a diet pattern that will offer something more sensible than our present food consumption ("the malnutrition of gluttony" as another describes the way we eat).

It's not an easy way to go, in either case, as an alternative. You do not simply pop some nuts into your mouth or spoon in some yogurt. It requires an encyclopedic knowledge of nutrients and some imaginative improvising to provide a menu that won't be dull.

Both the wives I've consulted agree that shopping and the preparation of meals are more time-consuming and demanding than they are for the woman who simply obeys her whims in the supermarket. That probably explains why there's a wide variety of literature on the subject, one book, "Diet For A Small Planet" by Frances Moore Lappe, being required reading.

The aim is to find that magic formula of proteins, the building bricks of body tissues, that will check the more or less constant process of breaking down and wearing out that, it seems, happens to your poor old body and mine.

The vegetarians say — and demonstrate only too well — that we over-indulge in carbohydrates and refined sugars, that we're "starch-eaters and the sugar-babies" existing on a diet that makes fat and flab, weak hearts and under-sized muscles. One of the meaner spokesmen of the breed has described the way we eat as similar to running a Rolls-Royce on paraffin.

The soya bean, the peanut, the sunflower seed and yeast aren't simply substitutes for protein meat, but are richer in protein content, pound for pound, than anything you'll find at your friendly neighborhood butcher's.

Harcourt Roy, the most articulate guru of the non-meat-eaters, put it all very succinctly and with that characteristic enthusiasm that I have found almost irresistible: "Your long-term aim is to reduce the starches and sugars, increase the proteins, plus, of course, the vitamin-rich fruits, vegetables and salads. Your body will love you for it. In fact, you'll feel so frisky that you will have to check your birth certificate to find out if you really are the same person. You could become a menace."

With many, of course, it goes deeper than that. They see the day when the continued use of the cow, calf, steer, pig and chicken will simply be so uneconomical that they'll be obsolete. Canada Packers can't say they haven't been warned.

Edward T. Banks, another immensely persuasive writer on the subject, says, "The world will not be able to sustain life, at the present rate of population expansion, by means of the wasteful method of providing something like eight tons of vegetable food for an animal in order to produce one ton of chemicalized meat."

It's a point that's a kind of catechism with vegetarians — they'll tell you, for example, that the world acreage of food production lands could be doubled if we relied on growing rather than grazing—but down deep they've a realistic pessimism.

The fact they recognize is that most of us are disinterested in diet for purely nutritional reasons, that we've a kind of sensual pleasure in eating, dictated by habit and custom, that we're push-overs for the taste manipulators, slaves to a sizzling steak, whatever the cost, and I am very much afraid that they are right.

Readers who want to pass on messages to Scott, suggest ideas for future columns, to tell him they love him or hate him, should address mail to: Rainbow Rd., R.R. 1, Ganges, B.C.

TOO MUCH UNION, DIRECTOR QUITS

George Duck, the city of Victoria's representative on the Gorge Road Hospital board for several years, has resigned because he says he's fed up with the emphasis on union matters in board discussions.

In his letter of resignation submitted to today's city council meeting, Duck says: "In past years we were always concerned with patient care and the improvement of our buildings and grounds for the benefit of both patients and the community.

"Now we spend most of our time deliberating on union and staff problems, especially their demands for money."

Duck says he will not be a party to "this continual taking from the public purse on an annual basis, with no increase in responsibility or performance."

Seven Honorary Citizens

Contributions to the social and cultural life of the community were recognized today when seven persons received honorary citizenship certificates from Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen.

The presentations at this afternoon's regular council meeting, one of Pollen's last civic duties before he vacates the mayor's chair, were made to:

Victoria Times columnist Elizabeth Forbes, who has written a regular column for the newspaper since 1964, when she retired after more than 20 years as women's editor;

Donald Gray, in recognition of his many years' work organizing Silver Threads variety concerts;

Mrs. Madge Hamilton, former assistant provincial archivist and authority on the city's heritage buildings.

Willard Ireland, former provincial archivist and provincial librarian;

Internationally-known wildlife artist Fenwick Lansdowne, whose paintings of birds are displayed in some of the great museums of the world;

Mrs. Annie McVie, for her service to senior citizens;

Mrs. Winifred Scott Wood, distinguished pianist and vice-principal of the Conservatory of Music.

Chancellor Voting Starts Next Week

Ballots will be sent out next week to 7,000 University of Victoria graduates, faculty and elected officials for election of a UVic chancellor.

The mail strike delayed the vote, but UVic registrar Ron Ferry said today ballots will be sent out as soon as the mail backlog clears next week. Deadline for vote returns is Jan. 9.

The term of incumbent Robert Wallace will continue until that time.

Wallace, 69, has been associated with UVic and Victoria College for 47 years.

His challenger, Dr. Robert Wright, 68, of Vancouver, was head of the B.C. Research Council for 26 years, prior to his retirement in 1972.

Star Status Cuts No Ice in Show Biz

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

When an amateur competition skater thinks about turning professional she has dreams of a star's life — sleeping late, being her own boss.

Gone will be the days of rigorous work and discipline.

But it's not in the least like that, says Canadian world champion and Ice Capades star Karen Magnussen.

Now within a few months of concluding her first contract with Ice Capades, Karen says after turning pro you become more obligated more than ever before.

You get less sleep, have to be super-careful of the amount you eat, and have almost no time to yourself.

"I do almost twice as much skating as anyone else in the company" she says. "I alternate among the three companies that are on the road and often have to learn numbers in a very short space of time."

In 75 days Karen has had seven days off and those were not consecutive.

She skates every day she's not traveling — three times on Saturdays, twice on Sundays. "You never get to sleep much before 2 a.m. and are certainly not expected to get sick."

After the competition environment where she was a rare and in a sense, pampered being, the professional life turned her into an automaton, a sort of property, Karen says.

"Line skaters and principals alike, we're all weighed in every Saturday," she says. "Two pounds grace are allowed but if a skater gains more, two pounds must be lost by the next Saturday or a $10 fine is levied.

"That's particularly hard on the line skaters because their pay is small and they have to foot the bills for their own accommodation and meals. It also means the kids tend to stuff themselves at the beginning of the week and starve the rest of the time."

KAREN . . . only seven days off

Still Karen accepts the life cheerfully and matter-of-factly. There is a thoroughly common-sense side to the 23-year-old champion's warm and natural personality.

"I only have a certain number of precious years," she says. "It's necessary that I make the most of them.

"I want more than anything to stay Canadian but it's discouraging to find how little interest there is in sustaining Canadian talent at home."

She and her manager, she explains, have the concept of a Canadian television special on skating, but while potential sponsors express enthusiasm for the idea, that's as far as it goes. No good reasons are given for not taking it up.

"The disinterest is general," she says, "and every year we lose so many of our best performers to the United States."

Spending more than 10 months of the year on tour is a good deal more than Karen would do if she had her way. She would like to tour about 20 weeks — and Canadian cities only, except for a possible two or three Pacific Coast U.S. cities.

In the American mid-west and southern centres, she finds baseball and football take all the limelight.

"You work your heart out in arenas half filled with people who have small understanding of the skater's art."

What's in the cards when she gives up touring? Well so far she plans to teach and coach, ski a lot and maybe open a sporting goods store because of her practical interest in equipment.

She has already influenced a skating boot design which CCM is bringing out under her name.

Travel and time factors virtually rule out hobbies but she is a collector. And her specialty? Skating memorabilia: old skates, blades, books about skating or any historic item on the subject.

Her biggest wish at the moment is for more free time to spend in the seaview home she has bought at Sechelt and to fulfil offers to commentate at competitions and accept other international invitations.

And she would like to be at home in Vancouver with her family for their traditional Scandinavian Christmas Eve gathering. But that's not possible because Ice Capades always performs somewhere on Christmas Day and this year she must be in Spokane by Dec. 24.

'NONSENSICAL' CHANGES AT CENTRE UNDER FIRE

Langford regional director Earl Pallister said Wednesday that "nonsensical" construction changes at the Juan de Fuca Recreation Centre are costing taxpayers thousands of dollars.

His comment came as the Capital Regional Board debated a $168.65 bill for extra work at the new $1,000,000 curling rink.

Directors were told bill was for revising a rear fire exit. While the fire marshal in Vancouver had approved a width of 5 feet 3 inches, the local assistant fire marshal had insisted on a width of 6 feet.

The debate came to an abrupt halt when the board was told the work had already been done. Payment was approved.

But Ron Dumont, retiring director from Sooke, said the issue should not be allowd to die because there was an estimated $28,000 in additonal costs from such changes at the $630,000 Sooke arena now under construction.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

He'd Share Fine

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Owner Carroll Rosenbloom of Los Angeles Rams said Wednesday that if Buffalo's Ralph Wilson is fined for criticizing National Football League officiating, he'd like to pay half of it.

Wilson, owner of the Bills, sharply censured an official's call when Buffalo lost ot Miami Dolphins 31-21 last Sunday and were eliminated from the playoffs.

Mercury Morris of Miami apparently fumbled deep in his own territory with about nine minutes left and Buffalo trailing, 24-21. Defensive end Pat Toomay of the Bills recovered at the Miami 28. The ball was ruled dead, Toomay was called for elbowing an official, and the Bills were penalized.

Rosenbloom, recovering from heart surgery, said he wired Wilson asking to pay half of any fine assessed by the NFL for criticism of officiating.

"If he is any kind of man, he's got to give me that privilege," declared the Rams owner, who had owned Baltimore Colts prior to coming to Los Angeles.

"When a man gets robbed like that, he must give me part of the action. I know the feeling. I have lost two major playoff games because of bad officiating. I suffered in silence and I wound up with a coronary.

"Wilson will, too, if he doesn't say something."

Rosenbloom referred to a questionable field goal call in the Colts' 13-10 loss to Green Bay Packers in the 1965 NFL conference playoff and to another call in last season's Rams-Minnesota Vikings NFC title game.

Thomas Shows Forum Fans

By The Canadian Press

Wayne Thomas played his first game on Montreal Forum ice in two years Wednesday night and the soft-spoken Toronto Maple Leafs goaltender said it was probably his best ever in Montreal.

Thomas, acquired by the Leafs from Montreal in a trade during the off-season, blocked 35 shots, helping Toronto to a 3-3 tie with the Canadiens in one of six National Hockey League games played.

In other action, Buffalo Sabres and New York Rangers battled to a 2-2 tie, Detroit Red Wings nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2, Chicago Black Hawks bombed Washington Capitals 7-2, Los Angeles Kings topped St. Louis Blues 5-0 and Philadelphia Flyers tied California Golden Seals 1-1.

Guy Lapointe deflected John Van Boxmeer's shot from the right point with 3:52 remaining in the third period to give Montreal its tie, preserving the Canadiens' unbeaten string at the Forum. The Canadiens are the only team in the NHL without a loss on their home ice this season and now have a 10-0-4 record at the Forum.

Yvan Cournoyer and Jacques Lemaire scored the other Montreal goals. Jim McKenny scored in the first period for the Leafs with Lanny McDonald getting two in the second to give Toronto a 3-1 lead going into the final period.

"We kind of laid back in the third period and they came on," said Thomas, who sat out the 1974-75 season as Montreal's third-string netminder.

Thomas thought his best save came in the last minute of the second period when he stopped Peter Mahovlich.

"I enjoyed that save the most. I just waved my stick in the air and the puck hit it. I didn't even see who shot the puck.

"I nver really played that well in the Forum when I was with the Canadiens. I played well on the road when I was with Montreal."

In New York, Gilbert Perreault beat New York's John Davidson on the goaltender's stick side with a 40-foot shot for his 15th goal with seven minutes remaining in the third period to give the Sabres their tie with the Rangers.

Jacques Richard was the other Buffalo scorer with Walt Tkaczuk and Jerry Holland replying for the Rangers.

The Red Wings snapped a three-game losing streak and extended their home-ice unbeaten record to six game with the win over Pittsburgh.

Mickey Redmond tipped in Rick Lapointe's with 5:21 remaining in the final period for the game-winning goal. Bill Hogaboam and Dennis Polonich were the other Detroit marksmen with Jean Pronovost and Lowell MacDonald replying for Pittsburgh.

MacDonald, shaken up in a first-period collision, left the game shortly after putting Pittsburgh ahead 3-2 with 38 seconds gone in the middle period. He ran into Detroit's Bryan Watson and suffered a possible broken thumb and an injured shoulder.

Dennis Hull had two goals and a pair of assists in Chicago's one-sided win over Washington.

Chicago's Grant Mulvey and Washington's Gordon Lane were assessed fighting majors at 10:47 and 46 seconds later, Darcy Rota of the Hawks and the Caps John Paddock were chased for spearing and fighting.

Centre Marcel Dionne scored a goal in each period to bring his total to 20 for the year and Rogatien Vachon recorded his third shutout of the season leading the Kings to their fifth consecutive win.

In Oakland, defenceman Rick Hamvton scored his sixth goal of the year at 5:34 of the third period to give California its tie with Philadelphia. Bill Barber scored for the Flyers in the first period.

Speaking of Domes, Or: Olympic Tickets Anyone?

Some mid-week musings and glad you asked. The world's biggest pimple is situated in downtown New Orleans and it's also been called "the domedest thing you ever saw." It's the Louisiana Superdome, that's what $163 million worth , seats 97,365, can absorb the 66,000-seat Houston Astrodome with room to spare and will probably never pay for itself.

If domed stadiums are the trend of the future, comlete with no rainouts, or weather problems, how noble can these domes get?

The Olympic Stadium in Montreal has been much in the news these days and may even be noticed on the skyline now, but will it be a dome or not — that is the new $400 million question? There is some doubt even that it will be ready for the Olympics which is why Olympic president Lord Killanin is keeping the hot line open to Mexico City. But tab that $400 million figure for what it's worth.

The Louisiana dome, for instance is 27 storeys high, and it got up there for less than $200 million. In Pontiac, Mich., Metropolitan Stadium was opened a few months ago. It seats 80,400 and cost only $55.7 million; and in Seattle, the Kingdome which will open next spring but won't have escalators in operation won't cost more than $60 million either.

Incidentally, the fact that Bill Veeck's purchase of the Chicago White Sox has been approved by the American League means that Seattle will have to look elsewhere, probably to Minnesota, if it hopes to have a franchise next season. That was the plan when the opening date for the Kingdome was set. Otherwise, a court case, pending since the Seattle Pilots' franchise was moved to Milwaukee after the ill-fated 1969 season, will be held in January. Pro football is all set, so is the name "The Seahawks" and all that is needed are the players.

But back to the Superdome. It was a victim of booboos from the very beginning. The foundations had to be rebuilt, changes in seating had to be made because 2,500 of the spectators would'nt have been able to see the four main scoreboards, there were at least two dozen lawsuits. All of which contributed to the jump in cost. And would you believe the original estimate. It was just $35 million.

So domes are mod, and promoters of all things are their greatest boosters. Not only is big-time professional sport attracted at whatever the cost of boosting civic egos but, with the vagaries of the weather no longer a concern, conventions, circuses, farm shows, religious gatherings and other extravaganzas just can't afford to pass up the many amenities these centres offer. Do the benefits outweight the costs? It probably will never be known but not in may cases is the obvious answer. For example, Bernard Levy, the excutive director of the Superdome has a sign posted in his office which bears repeating and reads: "When you are up to your ass in alligators, it's hard to remember that the original object was to drain the swamp."

Now, paging Jean Drapeau: or in Louisiana they ain't seen nothing yet! I suppose all Olympic ticket holders, particularly those who favor the swimming events, are aware of the possibility that the Olympic swim pool won't be ready on time. It's not that there won't be a swimming facility at the Games, if that occurs. That eventuality has been taken care of. But the real rib tickler is the fact that there were 10,000 tickets, or vouchers for that number, sold for the Olympic pool whereas the satellite site seats only 3,000. Could be kind of chummy, eh? But that's the norm. There have been 76,000 vouchers sold for the main stadium in Montreal too. The problem? There are only 66,000 seats.

Meanwhile, Richard Petty is the new king of the money makers in auto sport. Petty this season should take down about $500,000 for his year's work which would be a record. Al Unser held the previous high of $494,149, earned in 1947 and including a victory in the Indianapoolis 500 in his list of triumphs . . . Then there's Haystack Calhoun, a wrestler who has appeared here in the past. He had his automobile built to fit him and he pays fare and a half on the airlines . . . and now there's the hint that the tennis seniors are thinking of forming a world circuit. No! Rhomberg. No!

SLALOM WIN GIVES SWISS GIRL CUP LEAD

APRICA, Italy (Reuter) — Switzerland's Lise-Marie Morerod took the lead in women's World Cup ski standings today as she won a slamon event by clocking the fastest time on both runs.

Miss Morerod's total time was one minute 32.65 seconds, nearly three seconds faster than Rosi Mittermaier of West Germany whose combined time was 1:35.51.

Third was Italy's Claudia Giordani at 1:35.81.

Lauri Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., was the lone Canadian to complete both runs and was clocked at 1:45.72.

Fabienne Serrat of France took fourth place with a time of 1:36.88. She was followed by Daniele Debernard, France, 1:37.16; and Lindy Cochran, United States, 1:37.59.

Several leading skiers, including Betsy Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., fell and were eliminated during the first heat on the steep and icy course.

Bombers Bump Broncos To End Losing Streak

By The Canadian Press

A five-game losing streak for the Flin Flon Bombers ended Wednesday night on home ice as they cinched a 7-5 victory over the Lethbridge Broncos in a close Western Canada Hockey League game.

The Bombers negated the Broncos' 3-1 first-period lead by tying the score 3-3 at the end of the second. Flin Flon's Rick Gosselin broke a 5-5 tie in the third period with the winning goal,

In other WCHL action Wednesday, the eastern division's cellar dwelling Regina Pats earned a 6-6 tie with the division-leading Saskatoon Blades in a clash in Regina, while Calgary Centennial's goaltender, Jerry Price, helped his western division basement team to a 5-3 victory over the Kamloops Chiefs, high-flyers in the western division.

Kevin Marinos and Kelly Davis led the Bombers' attack with two goals each, while Kim Davis and Mark Davidson added singles.

John Hammond's goal at 19:01 of the third period assured the tie for the Pats, who fired 45 shots at Saskatoon's goaltender Randy Ireland. Regina goaltender Bob Leslie faced 35 shots.

Price, a little more than a week ago, stopped 43 shots to defeat Kamloops by one goal, and showed his mettle again in Wednesday's game by stopping 29 Kamloops drives. The Chiefs' netminder, Bryan Henderson, made 25 saves.

Centennials claimed their third straight victory on singles by newly-acquired Gary Rissling, who had a first-period power-play goal, Paul Enquist, Jerry Bancks, Rick Hodgson and Elmer Ray.

Barry Melrose, Dave Hatheway and Ryan Walter retaliated for the Chiefs.

Mom and Dad Nice —Away from Ice

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former minor hockey coach testified Wednesday that the parents of hockey player Greg Neeld are "wonderful people . . . away from the ice."

Vince Sita of North Vancouver made the statement in British Columbia supreme court before Mr. Justice J. C. Bouck at a libel suit against radio broadcaster Al Davidson of CKNW and Western Broadcasting Ltd.

Sita said he was a coach at North Shore Winter Club when Mr. and Mrs. Norman Neeld of West Vancouver were members. He said that Greg, now 20, tried out for his team, but signed with a Richmond team after his mother insisted Greg play on defence instead of at centre.

The Neelds "are known as avid hockey fans who do their best to promote their sons in sport," said Sita.

"Away from the ice they are wonderful people," he said. "Their problem is they don't believe the coaches are doing a good enough job with their sons."

The Neelds and Greg Neeld are suing Davidson and Western for general damages for a broadcast by Davidson on Dec. 17, 1973, the day it was decided in Toronto to remove Greg's left eye after he was injured in a junior game.

Davidson testified that he received calls from listeners stating that "they (the Neelds) deserved it." He agreed that he had broadcast that figure skater Karen Magnussen's parents had made a champion out of their daughter and that the Neelds did it their way and made thousands of bad friends and envious acquaintances.

He said that the negative portions of the broadcast were directed mainly at the parents.

Greg Neeld, who currently is attempting to gain a position with Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association, told the court he sacrificed his childhood to hockey and is still dedicated to the pursuit of a professionl playing career.

Norman Neeld, an Air Canada pilot, admitted under cross-examination that his family had been expelled from the Winter Club in 1972 after he and his wife had clashed with a club hockey manager and a coach about two of their sons being dropped from a hockey team.

David Wesley Gill, a former Winter Club coach, said Mrs. Neeld used profanity in a confrontation about his own son and that she also tried to block his car from leaving the club.

Greg Neeld played hockey last season for Calgary Centennials, a junior team in the Western Canada Hockey league, and performed briefly for a Reno, Nev., team in the Southwest Hockey League in October before the league folded.

The trial continues.

SOVIETS SHOW VERSATILITY

OTTAWA (CP) — Moscow Selects scored their second victory of a Canadian tour Wednesday, defeating Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association major junior A series, 9-6.

It was a real display of team versatility for 5,044 fans in the 9,500-seat Civic Centre as nine players scored for the Russians, who Tuesday defeated Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the professional American Hockey league, 4-2.

It also was a revelation to the fans, used to rough and ready OHA junior hockey, as only eight penalties were called in the game — five of them to Russian players.

The game was clean and fast with the 67s able to stay with the Russians throughout despite early expectations they would be skated off the ice by the third period.

Boris Alexandrov, Valdimir Golikov and Serge Kotov gave the Russian team a 3-2 first period advantage before Vladimire Belousov, Alexander Kulikov and Baldimir Repmov scored unanswered goals in the second.

Ottawa actually outscored Russia in the third period. Goals for Russia went to Alexander Barinev, Valdimir Kovin and Alexei Volchenkov.

Ottawa goals were scored by Larry Skinner and Tom MacDonell in the first period and by Paul Gardiner, with two, Peter Lee and Bruce Baker in the third.

The Selects outshot the 67s 45-34 on the game — Bob Daley and Jim Fraser split Ottawa goaltending duties while Victor Doroshenko was in goal for the Selects.

An indication of the spirit shown by the 67s was when they weathered consecutive minor penalties in the first period and when Gardiner scored his second goal, the last of the game, with Vic Sirko serving a penalty and Ottawa a man short.

Sirko was one of four players — two forwards and two defencemen — picked up for the game from Oshawa Generals.

Blues Bombarded By Canadians

Perry Head and Darrel Ell hammered in three goals each Wednesday night to spark James Bay Athletic Association Canadians to a 10-1 triumph over Chemainus Blues in a Big Six Hockey League game at Juan de Fuca Arena.

Ken Mirreau added two goals for Canadians while single tallies were contributed by Bill Philips and Brian Preston. Frank Clark averted a shutout for the Blues.

No Suspension

RED DEER (CP) — A threat of suspension against the four Alberta teams in the Western Canada Hockey League has been withdrawn, an official of the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association said Wednesday.

"The WCHL has reversed its stand and provided the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association with assurances it will abide by all CAHA rules and regulations," said Stu Peppard of Calgary, AAHA vice-president.

Norm's 500th Steals Sheehy Act

It isn't often a hockey player scores four goals in a game and has to share the spotlight.

That's exactly what happened to Tim Sheehy of Edmonton Oilers, who had his four-goal game on the same night team-mate Norm Ullman joined hockey's exclusive 500-goal club.

Sheehy and Ullman helped the Oilers to a 7-4 win over the slumping Quebec Nordiques in a World Hockey Association game.

Ullman, who switched to the WHA this year after a 20-year stay in the National Hockey League with Detroit Red Wings and Toronto Maple Leafs, scored his ninth and 10th goals of the season in the third period after Quebec narrowed Edmonton's lead to one goal.

The Provost, Alta., native became the eighth player ever to score 500 major league goals in regular-season action, joining Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull , Frank Mahovlich Maurice Richard, Phil Esposito, Jean Beliveau and Johnny Bucyk.

In Wednesday's other games, Winnipeg Jets edged Toronto Toros 6-5 in overtime, New England Whalers edged Minnesota Fighting Saints 3-2 and Indianapolis Racers shaded Phoenix Roadrunners 2-1.

Ullman's career has come full circle since he played junior for Edmonton Oil Kings and turned professional with Edmonton Oilers of the old Western Hockey League in 1954-55.

The big league career that began the following season with Detroit appeared to be near its end last year when he saw limited duty with the Leafs and finished with nine goals and 26 assists, his lowest totals since his rookie year.

But the return to his native province seems to have given him a second wind. Thursday's goals gave him 35 points for the season, making him Edmonton's top scorer.

Sheehy, a former U.S. college star, got two goals in each of the first two periods to increase his output for the season to 15 and give Edmonton a 4-1 lead.

Winnipeg's Bobby Hull whistled a slap shot between the legs of Toronto goaltender Dave Tataryn in the first minute of overtime to give the Jets their win.

Tataryn, a rookie from Whitby Warriors of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, relieved starter Mario Vien in the first period and played another outstanding game.
